Hamilton Honored

Quakertown Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution honors Alexander Hamilton, who helped assure the success of the Constitution in the years immediately following the Constitutional Convention.

In 1787-88, aided by James Madison and John Jay, he wrote the Federalist Papers, which were instrumental in swaying opinion in New York state toward ratification of the Constitution.

As President George Washington's Secretary of Treasury, he placed the country on a sound financial footing and worked toward the development of a strong, industrial nation.
