Kurtis, Park rule at West Bloomfield

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Doug Kurtis of Northville and Laurel Park — not the shopping center in Livonia but the runner from Ann Arbor — each thought they'd use the 14th annual West Bloomfield half-marathon as an easy training run. Each ended up racing to victory and walking out of the awards ceremony with the first prize of a color television.

Kurtis didn't even know till race day she'd be running in West Bloomfield. A friend called and asked her if she wanted to race, and since she was planning a long run, anyway, she figured why not do it with plenty of company. It wasn't until the two-mile mark that Park, 27, found out, much to her surprise, that she was in the lead in the first half-marathon of her career.

Her time of 1:25:21 was good for a four-minute win over Maureen Carter, 35, of Brighton. Kurtis, who last year set the world record for most sub-2:20 marathons in a single year, 12, was hardly an upset winner. After all, he had set the course record here a year ago, in 1:07:32. But with another marathon just a week away, Kurtis, a former standout at Livonia Stevens, planned on a cruise-control run at 1:10 pace.

Instead, he ended up in a heart-stopping, crowd-dripping, back-and-forth stretch duel with Don Johns, 25, a one-time NCAA runner-up 10,000 meters on the track.

KURTIS SURGED to a 10- to 15-yard lead just after the 12-mile mark and seemed to have it wrapped up. But here came Johns, crunched furiously, and when he passed Kurtis at 12:45, he had the look of a runaway winner.

Kurtis, who won the Barcelona, Bangkok and Detroit Free Press marathons last year, knows how to find his way to the winner's circle. He used his superior strength to muscle up the last quarter-mile hill to the finish line, blowing past Johns and winning by 10 seconds as the crowd went wild.

Trailing him were 744 other entrants. Another 425 entered the inaugural Earth Day 3.5-mile walk. "I didn't want to run that hard. I saw Don at the starting line and I said, oh-oh," said Kurtis, who in the spirit of Earth Day was a long-sleeved T-shirt to the awards ceremony which declared on the back: "The answer is very clear: Stop polluting the atmosphere."

When Johns ran together with 11 miles, acting more as if it were a training run than one of the top races in Michigan. But from 11 on, it was serious.

Kurtis and Johns ran together half a mile from the end, Kurtis nearly packed it in. "I was almost ready to give up. I didn't want to kill myself. Then I thought, if I'm going to run faster than 1:10, I might as well make the effort."

EFFORT — THAT was the key word on this hot, sunny day, on this grueling course with its uphill, downhill and endless turns.

Greg Gillson of Windsor had done the Boston Marathon the Monday before and thought West Bloomfield might be a little nice race. Welcome to reality, Greg. "That course is tough. I've never run it before because it's usually the same rock as Boston. I'd heard what a nice course it was and wanted to see it. Whew! I don't think I'll pull that trick again (running West Bloomfield six days after a marathon)."

"There were times I wanted to stop and walk. That's what you get for being brain dead," said Gillson, who finished 13th overall in 1:17:37.

"What neighborhoods, eh?" he said. "I couldn't believe how big those houses were. I said to someone: 'I don't think we're running through the welfare district.'"

Bob Schar, editor of the Farmington Observer, was making his first appearance in West Bloomfield, too. "With all those ups and downs, it's hard to get into a pace," he said. He'd hoped to break two hours. He gladly settled for 2:01.

Some runners complained of the heat, though serious problems were negligible. Most of the complaints — foot complaints — were about those hills.

Bill DeChant doesn't see many hills on his Troy postal route. Even though he's a veteran of the race, these steep uphill and downhill al-
