

Interior designers giving seminar

"There is something noble in a classic design," said Pierre Pozier, partner of fabric king Frederick Schumacher.

Traditional furnishings and interiors are the focus of the seminar at the Michigan Design Center on Friday, Nov. 9. Sponsored by Schoolcraft College, the program, open to the public, brings notable professional designers to share their expertise in traditional design. Topics include the staying power of good traditional design, new style trends and the influence of creative designers. Artistic elements include color, line, texture and space in interior designs will be described as well as basic window treatments and how to compare and use textiles. For a brochure or to register, call 462-4448.

The seminar begins with registration/coffee at 9 a.m., followed by the program and guided tours of traditional showrooms at the Michigan Design Center. Luncheon is included in the $55 fee.

The speakers will be Daniel Clancy, ASID, Steven Telch, ASID, and Robin Wilson. Clancy, a partner in the interior design firm of Perlmutter-Freiwald, Inc., bases his work on a strong sense of traditional design. He favors an eclectic approach using fresh combinations of color and textures. Clancy did the Townsend Hotel in Birmingham, executive suites for Manufacturer's Bank and the Country Club of Detroit. His residential clients include Henry Ford II, Lee Iacocca and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fisher III. His work has been published in House & Gardens Magazine, House Beautiful, Detroit Monthly and other publications. Telch is a senior designer with Perlmutter-Freiwald. He is best known for his creative mix of styles using neutral themes with strong accents of color. Telch has completed traditional interiors in both the commercial and residential arenas. His projects include a Corktown historic interior, an Acapulco villa and numerous Detroit residences. Williams, a senior designer, has been associated with Perlmutter-
