

Chief promotes school-business partnerships

By Casey Hane
Staff writer

Farmington's school chief has followed up on his pledge to invite business leaders into the classroom, and he hopes the informal partnerships will be beneficial for both students and community.

In a recent mailing to Farmington/Farmington Hills Chamber of Commerce members, school Superintendent Michael Flanagan invited them to share their experience with students, helping "jump-start kids into... understanding the importance of their education."

The letter included an information sheet for business people interested in either visiting classrooms, or inviting students to their workplace, to complete and return to the school district.

"Your expertise, as well as experience, is an untapped resource for the 12,000 kids who come to our school district each day," he said. "I truly believe that school districts with young people in the next decade will make or break us. The future of our country is at stake."

ONE WEEK after the letters were sent, 45 people ranging from top executives to the owners and managers of small enterprises had responded. Flanagan, who sits on the chamber of commerce board, said he will expand his request to non-chamber members before putting together a resource directory for the district's 800 teachers to use in enhancing their teaching methods.

He hopes to get several hundred resource names.

"This is something that's been on my mind for a long time," said Flanagan, who has a business and education background. "I'm convinced we really touched a chord."

Flanagan's recent action follows comments he made last March at an annual State of the Cities address at Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance Co., where he suggested mentorship programs and other partnerships between business and schools. He received a good response and had several business leaders approach him showing interest.

At that time, Flanagan said educators must "fess up" to their problems and start looking for ways to better educate students. Community resources are an important way, he said. "In education, we're going to start talking about outcomes. It's not what we put in, it's how the students come out."

Although a number of teachers in the district have already made use of businesses and other community resources, this will encourage

Michael Flanagan: "I truly believe the work we do with young people in the next decade will make or break us. The future of our country is at stake."

age others to do the same, he said. "I believe there will be a large number who didn't know how to make the contacts. It's just an extra thing" to enhance learning.

THE RECENT effort is not an official partnership program, but Flanagan said he can see it expanding in the future. "It's a door opener," he said. "Mentorships, and other things, will naturally evolve from this."

He also said he hopes area businesses will make use of school district resources, including help with adult literacy, special programs, and school buildings for meetings, among others. "I see these partnerships as 'what can they do for us' but also 'what can we do for them. I want it to be a true partnership — not just (taking) another hand-out," he added.

Council upset by Mideast buildup

"Certainly the world is at need when it is led by war," she added. "We felt ourselves moved to make a statement about it."

THE SISTERS' letter urged that U.S. involvement be focused on supporting efforts to negotiate "the prevention of this impending global disaster."

"I don't think we've exhausted all peaceful means," Sister Gretchen said. "All kinds of negotiations are possible... but I'm not sure we're willing to invest as much energy in them."

"And I object to the U.S. sort of running in as a savior when many of our allies are not feeling so moved."

Like many critics of the military buildup, Sister Gretchen said the nation's oil supply in the Middle East, not the safety of the people of Kuwait — is the real reason for the war footing.

"Sure, it's a matter of our economic comfort and well-being," she said, "but we have to weigh that against the lives that would be lost in a violent conflict."

Is war ever justified? "In an age when nuclear weapons are part of the strategy, I don't think so," the 30-year sister answered.

FUTHERMORE, she said, negotiations to resolve the conflict should be carried out with "the Arab point of view" in mind.

"Are we setting the terms of negotiation solely from our cultural perspective?" she asked. "I have a feeling that we have this cultural imperialism that sort of takes over."

The Sisters of Mercy stand on the Persian Gulf conflict is sure to be controversial, but Sister Gretchen said it was their duty to voice their opposition to a possible war.

"There are some people who will say that church groups should mind their own business," said the sister, who was born in Dearborn and grew in the metro area.

"I happen to think that the business of religion is the business of human lives and relationships. This is a religious issue."

Planners want city to settle IRO issue

"There is an inequity to allowing certain things against multiples but not (against) single-family dwellings," Hillside resident Joan Lewandowski said.

THROUGHOUT THE public hearing, however, residents referred to Kattan's acreage and said they don't want it rezoned to IRO.

"I haven't heard a compelling reason offered why the whole Farmington Hills zoning philosophy should be changed for this one piece of property (Kattan's)," Independence Hills resident David Kandt said.

Kandt presented commissioners with written arguments for eliminating all types of residential uses next to IRO. His comments included concern for city officials' ability to control and enforce as well as understand the type of toxic and hazardous uses companies in an IRO district might use.

Though residents said an office use would be a preferable buffer for Hillside and the subdivisions, commissioners and planning consultant Claude Coates disagreed.

An office use in the areas left for IRO zoning, such as 90 acres at 11 Mile and Halsted (already zoned IRO), would be inappropriate. Office uses generate the most traffic and Halsted Road is not designed for that. Industrial and commercial uses also are inappropriate, Coates said.

City attorney John Donohue spoke of Kattan's lawsuit against the city. He said he plans to defend the city's office zone on Kattan's property as reasonable. That property is not the best for office use because of its narrow frontage and steepness, he said.

"If we say IRO is not appropriate we must also say industrial is not appropriate next to multiple-family," Donohue said. "What am I supposed to argue should be appropriate next to that site?"

Report shows crime down in Farmington

The following information is provided by the Farmington Department of Public Safety, which incorporates both fire and police protection for residents of the city of Farmington. Residents of business people with questions, concerns, or who need information should call the department at 743-7262.

CRIME DOWN

Second quarter police statistics show crime on the decrease in the city, according to a report ending Sept. 30.

Serious crime was down 23 percent compared to the same period in 1989, with 312 incidents reported compared with 406 last year. This is the second quarter such a decrease has occurred.

It is anticipated that the city will continue to see a significant reduction in crime through the end of 1990," Laufford said in a report to city council. "If the current trend continues, the city may experience the lowest serious crime rate in over 20 years."

Other less serious crimes rose two percent, general non-criminal complaints to the department fell four percent and roadway accidents increased 3 percent.

BUSINESS FOCUS

Farmington police are putting a special emphasis on business during the holiday season, putting decoy police vehicles in the business district, assigning detectives to spot check stores, and encouraging businesses to schedule seminars on shoplifting and internal theft.

The city's Business Watch program, which alerts business members if suspicious persons or shoplifters are in the area, continues. So far this year, only one alert initiated by the police was issued, said Commander Chuck Lee.

FIRE SAFETY

Fire marshal Joe Schornack is encouraging people to be aware of electrical light problems, fireplaces, space heaters and Christmas tree safety during the holiday season:

- Check lights which have been stored in cold or hot areas. Such conditions may cause cracked wires and worn insulation problems. Discard a cord which shows signs of wear; they can cause fires, shocks and even electrocution. Also, beware of overloading circuits.

- Choose a fresh tree and once it is home keep plenty of water in its base. A dry tree is the source of more than 1,000 home fires each year.

- Space heaters should be kept away from table cloths, curtains, bedspreads and other furniture. In order to enjoy a fireplace safely, creosote build-up on chimneys should be removed with a thorough cleaning; how often it is cleaned depends on how often it is used. Burn hardwoods such as oak and maple and avoid burning pine and poplar.

Just a couple of hours a week with a caring, certified teacher can make a world of difference in subjects ranging from reading and writing to basic math and algebra. Your child will benefit from increased confidence and self-esteem.
