Council exchange

Highmeadow kids get taste of high school

A STUDENT Council Exchange program between Harrison High School and Highmeadow Common Campus is allowing the elementary students to get a taste of high school life. A second exchange planned for May will allow the high school students to visit the elementary campus in Farmington Hills, as well. Highmeadow contacted the high school with the idea, and it blossomed from there, said Joe Ludwig, Harrison student council sponsor.

Both Highmeadow and Harrison have active student councils in place. "Our goal for this exchange is to help the Highmeadow students learn about how high school student government functions," said Highmeadow principal Janice Collier. During the April 16 event, each elementary student was paired with a high school student council member, with whom they ate lunch, attended a class and then observed a high school student council meeting.

Harrison sophomore Jeremy Teachman shows third grader Jillian Treflek and fourth grader Meghan Fay his French class textbook during a recent visit.
