OWL sends Mother's Day message

More older women may be working than ever before, but going to work doesn't mean they will become financially secure, said a report released by the Farmington Chaplewill, as part of the samuel Mother's Day message. Low wages, segregation into traditional women's occupations, discrimination and caregiving responsibilities will conspire to keep older women in poverty, concluded the report, which is a 12-page profile of problems encountered by older women in the work force. Nationwide OWL's railying cry for Mother's Day is, "For men, they created Mother's Day is, "For men, and gold watches, For women they created Mother's Day is, "For men, they created Mother's Day is, "For men, they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is," For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is," For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is," For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is," For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is," For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is," For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is," For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is," For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is," For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is," For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is," For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is, "For men they created Mother's Day is, "For confine them to low-paying or part-time jobs," said Farmington OWL president Virginia Nicoli.

AMONG FINDINGS in the re-

• The median carnings of mid-life and older women who worked full time were less than two-thirds those of men. • Fifty-eight percent of em-ployed women over the age 45 work in low-paid jobs in the sales, service and cierical sector of the economy.

Young employed women are as segregated in low-paying jobs

* Young employee women are as segregated in low-paining jobs as older women.

Although many employers still believe that older women make poor employees, surveys show that they are loyal, competent workers with an average job tenure of 9.4 years.

"We still live in a society permeated by stereotypes of older women," Nicol said.

"In the media, older women are often invisible. Medical research has tended to ignore or understate
older. women's health problems.
Employers often view them as Ies
flexible and adaptable than older workers. These stereotypes don't
"trealite" fit reality."

IN ISSUING its report, Farmington OWL called for an end to job and wage discrimination against older women through legislation.

against once women through real station. So for pay equity legislation that would eliminate disparities in wages between men and women doing comparable work. OWL wants improved education, training and employment opportu-nities for women under the Job Training Partnership Act, ade-quate appropriations under the Displaced Homemakers Assist-ance Act and enacting the Non-traditional Employment for Wom-en Act.

OWL works for the elimination of discrimination against women by allowing them to sue for mone-tary damage in discrimination cases.
