action in limited light. Fast films also allow you to photograph at smaller apertures to gain depth-of-amaller apertures to gain depth-or-field. All of these advantages are avail-able in color negative films such us Kodak Cold 1600, Fuji Super 1800, Konica 3200 and Ektur 1000. Folica Side users, there's Ektachrome 800/ 1600, and black and white lovers can use Fuji Neopan 1600 and the remarkable Kodak T-Max 3200

REMEMBER THAT film speeds are directly related to shutter speeds and apertures.

Say, for example, that asa 100 Say, for example, toat ass a to film gives you a meter reading in a low light situation of F-4 at 1/8 sec-ond — too slow to hand hold. Changing to a 1600 speed film will enable you to gain 4 F-stops (100 to 200 is one, 200 to 400 is two, 400 fo 800 is three, and 800 to 1600 is four) and you can now hand hold easily at; 1/125 second at the same sperture. Conversely, remaining at the 1/8 second shutter speed with 1600 speed film will allow you to close the aper-ture down to F-16 for a tremendous increase in depth-of-field.

BE SURE not to use fast films for all your photo taking. When the light is bright, stick to slower emulsion films. Your pictures will be less grainy and will have more saturated colors.

But, as you can see, faster films certainly have their place. So speed on down to your tilm supplier for a few rolls. Just don't drive too fast.

Party-goers, drive-in theaters and vampires all come alive as darkness approaches. After dark is one of the times that the new super fast films come alive, too.

Never before have so many high-speed emulsions been available. They've practically introduced a new dimension to photography. You can now shoot in dimmer light than ever before, use faster abutter speeds and gain increased depth-of-field.

Fast films mean natural, indoor Fast films mean natural, indoor portraits even under candlelight, inuminated night scenes and good shots at the concert and circus where flash just won't do.

Fast films mean faster shutter speeds to enable you to capture the
