Meet the 1970-71 Observer

Meet the 1970-71 Observer basketball all-stars. It's another of what can be called truly "a dream team." The team has everything ... size, scorers, rebounders, paymakers, defensive statwarts...and leaders. Picked by the 20 area basketball coaches, from Westland and Garden City north ward through Livonia to Farmington, Southfield and Birmingham it's a quinted strength of the control of the cont

SCOTT LOVE
Birmingham Groves
Generally tabbed as the "player of the area".
This F-7, senior forward is the second in his family to sparkle for Groves. Brother Craig preceded him and has gone on to fame at Ohlo University, where it's expected Scott will enroll in the fall. Scott performed on the Groves varsity for three seasons.

A year ago he scored 459 points. This past season he came up with 450 for a 27-the Livonia school never fell behind.

Midway in the initial quarter the Spartans threw up a three-quarter court press and Hockstra and Kelly Smith tallied two points apiece to give Stevenson a 11-7 lead. But Greg Puishes and Mike Roller each count-cred with a basket to knot the count 11-11.

Down by eight points, 24-16, East executed a successful full-court press with 39 seconds left in the second stanza that paid off with three quick buckets by Jackson. But Stevenson walked off the floor at halfitme with a 24-22 lead.

The Spartans returned with a shortmaking display that threatened to blow East off the Court.

Exarhos hit a 20-foot jumper and Hoekstra cashed in on a brace of outside shots that gave Stevenson a 30-22 bulge, its largest lead in the game.

But Jackson retaliated with a perfect jumper from the top of the key and made good on a charity show.

In between, however, Exarbos slipped in a two pointer. And after Jackson countered with a basket, the Spartian marksman cashed in on a pair of free throws, DeHarte canned a hoop, and Exarbos made another bucket.
