Laurie Eisenhower forms new company

Dancer/choreographer Laurie Eisenhower, assistant professor of dance at Oakland University, has resigned as artistic director of the Harbinger Dance Company.

She has formed a new professional dance repertory company, the Eisenhower Dance Ensemble, with former Harbinger members.

As artistic director of the new company, Eisenhower plans to showcase her own choreography as well as commission reputable choreographers from around the country to set dance works for the repertory.

"I'm excited about the prospects of this new organization," she said. "We've already generated a lot of enthusiasm and support. We're looking forward to a great year."

During its first season, the Eisenhower Dance Ensemble will be performing at the Detroit Festival for the Arts, the University of Michigan, the American College Dance Festival in Alabama and OU, and in the Third Avenue Performance Space of Columbus, Ohio, as well as other places.
