STAR NOTES

Efrem Zimbalist Jr. is no Scooby Do

By Amy Schmidt

The Family Channel has promised an outstanding cast will give voice to its new animated adventure series The Legend of Prince Valiant, premiering Tuesday, Sept. 3.

Some actors were specially recruited to do voice-overs for the host of Camelot characters to include King Arthur, Queen Guinevere and Sir Gawain. Others sought out the show's producer David J. Corbett.

"Interestingly enough," says Corbett, "a number of them came to us because they had been wanting to do voice-over-type work in animation and could never find a series because they didn't want to talk like a Smurf. And they didn't want to be a Scooby Doo, and they didn't know how to talk like a robot."

Slated to play the dignified King Arthur is actor Efrem Zimbalist Jr.,

whom viewers may remember as Stuart Bailey in 77 Sunset Strip (1956-64). Following that series, Zimbalist starred in the police drama The F.B.I. from 1965 to 1974.

More recently the actor, who, incidentally, is the father of Remington Steele's Stephanie Zimbalist, played the title role in The Family Channel's Zorro. He dropped out after contracting salmonella poisoning, and Henry Darrow became the mysterious masked crusader.

Other Prince Valiant voices include those of Robby Benson, Samantha Eggar and Tim Curry.

CABLE NEWS

Time for more MTV Video Music Awards

By Dan Rice

It's been ten years since MTV first aired the Buggles' "Video Killed the Radio Star," thus launching their 24-hour music video channel, which has grown from a fresh and innovative medium to a monopolistic dictator of "popular" music. On Thursday, Sept. 5, MTV will broadcast live to the entire world the 1991 MTV Video Music Awards, with finalists for honors in rap, dance, metal and alternative videos, determined by an elite group within the industry. R.E.M. leads the nominees with eight nods for "Losing My Religion," plus a ninth for the new category of Best Long-Form Video. Arsenio Hall will play host once again, and slated performers include Prince, Paula Abdul, Van Halen, Poison, Mariah Carey, LL Cool J and C&C Music Factory.

Some people will tell you television isn't nearly as entertaining as looking out your window in an urban neighborhood. If emergency sirens sound like a fanfare to you, be thrilled to know that yet another reality-based program is set on a collision course with The Family Channel on Sunday, Sept. 1. Witness to Survival combines actual footage, interviews and those dreaded re-enactments recounting the tales of those who have walked (or crawled) away from tragedy.
