Something New in Sports

Balloon jumping is a new sport in England. A small balloon not quite buoyant enough to lift a man clear off the ground is attached to his body by a suitable harness. A slight puff of his feet will then send him some distance into the air and even make it possible for him to jump over a small house. Obstacle races are arranged.

Big Demand for Bananas

More than half the expenditures of the people of this country for foreign fruits in 1924 were for bananas. The value of banana imports reached $22,074,410, as compared with $19,738,508 in 1923. Americans, particularly Bostonians, own most of the banana plantations in this hemisphere.
