FUTURE BECKONS YOUNG AMERICANS

Achievements of Past Only Show Great Opportunity Ahead.

Great events of the past quarter century which lead some young men to complain that all the big things have been done, leaving no opportunity for them, as a matter of fact only go to show that even greater opportunity today lies ahead of them, F. N. Shepherd, Executive Manager of the American Bankers Association, recently told members of the American Institute of Banking in New York. After reviewing the outstanding accomplishments in science, industry and finance during the last twenty-five years, Mr. Shepherd emphasized the reward given men of achievement in America, especially in the financial field.

"The achievements of the past are the groundwork for the opportunities of today and tomorrow," he said. "There never was a time when so great were the potentialities of the individual. The world was never so ready and able to pay well for what it wants." For superior service to society, undiminished by the passage of time, whether through invention or production or organization or distribution of useful articles, no reward is begrudged, particularly here in America.

"Adding to human comfort and happiness and better. The world has shared, but it is in America that they have reached their highest development and utilization. The American spirit of useful enterprises, however, does not confine itself within our own borders. It permeates the entire world and renders great service to peoples other than our own.

"Let us pass over America's service to humanity in the war and consider what is being done now. Largely to rebuild the economic life of a world shattered by the war and its devastating after effects, America has since the war, loaned other peoples over ten billion dollars. She has advanced a billion and a half in foreign financing was consummated in the United States. American financial genius has so far readjusted our banking machinery to meet the needs of our obligations that stupendous foreign loans, such as the $100,000,000 Dawes plan credit to Germany, are concluded and the books closed after being open to public subscription only a few minutes.

"With our new world viewpoints in America have many great things yet to do. These things are typical of the broadminded world viewpoint of American finance. It shows the statesmanship of the men who guide our business affairs today. Certainly there is an inspiration in this and the great opportunities which await us."

Proposed Agricultural Buildings--Michigan State Fair

FARMERS GET NEW BUILDING FOR THEIR 1926 EXHIBITS

Magnificent Agricultural Structure Provided by State Will be Ready When Fair Opens.
When the big crowds pour into the State Fair grounds during the week of September 5 to 11, and seek the Agricultural Exhibits, they will find them housed in a splendid new building adjacent to the Coliseum, at the very center of the grounds.
The farmers of Michigan will rejoice to know that the state government has given particular thought to their interests and, in line with demonstrated efficiency, has worked out a financial plan with the committees of the State Fair Board, by which winter rentals will pay for the building within about two years.
The new building, which is now under construction and will be ready in ample time for use this fall, will be 260 feet long and 140 feet wide. Plans for the new structure were developed by the Agriculture Committee of the State Fair Board under the chairmanship of Prof. J. F. Cox, of Michigan State College, and approved at Lansing. The plans make it the most magnificent building in America for the exhibition of agricultural products, and the board of managers feels confident that it will be a matter of genuine satisfaction to the farmers of the Wolverine State to be able to show their products in the most favorable conditions, and by a plan of finance that will in no way burden the taxpayers.
For Exclusive Exhibition of Crops, Fruits and Flowers
The agricultural committee of the State Fair Board is authority for the statement that the new structure will be used exclusively for agricultural, horticultural and farm-related exhibits of an educational nature, and that no space will be allotted for any commercial purposes whatsoever. This sounds the knell of the noisy, "necessary" hawking and ballyhooing which resulted from commercialism within the agricultural space in past years. These new arrangements mean a dignifying of the agricultural section and the placing of its exhibits on the highest plane of educational and agricultural value.
Another feature that should please Michigan farmers is the fact that they will be protected from the competition of exhibitors who do not grow products they show.
Ample Space for Farm Organizations and State Agricultural Industries
Prof. Cox says of the new building that "it will give an opportunity for the suitable portrayal of Michigan's highly organized and wonderfully diversified agriculture. In addition to the competitive displays of crops, fruit and flowers, ample space will be offered for the use of the Farm Bureau, Granges, Gleasers, Farmers' Clubs and other farm organizations, and for the exhibition of the products of canning companies, sugar manufacturers, seed interests, millers, hay dealers and other organized state industries directly dependent upon agriculture."
All prospects indicate that the 1926 State Fair is to transcend in beauty, importance, entertainment and intrinsic value, all prior fairs in Michigan. With the new agricultural building as the center, the farmers of Michigan are expected in full force, and not only to exhibit their products, but also as visitors to the whole fair and the unexcelled facilities and attractions.
