Good-Hearted Trapper

Patrick Walsh, Alaskan trapper, had sixteen captive beavers in boxes around his campfire, says Capper's Weekly. At night a big male beaver came down the stream to a point about twenty feet away. Sitting up with his forefeet crossed the beaver began his song and the prisoners in the boxes answered in turn. The old beaver was looking for his mate. She was a captive and her answers to him were so plaintive that Walsh released her. Then he stood by as the happy pair splashed into the river and went splashing and chattering to the opposite side.
