MICHIGAN IN SUMMER

Recently a large number of Michigan publishers had an opportunity to visit the northern part of the Lower Peninsula, many of them for the first time, and view at first hand the wonderful things that nature has done to make this state the summer playground of the nation. The pencil pushers were in the north country for three days as guests of the Harbor Springs Chamber of Commerce, and not only did they come in contact with the beautiful region surrounding that community, but in going and coming and in side trips during their stay they saw unfolded glories of scenic nature for a hundred miles of which they had never dreamed.

Which reminds us that we seem to be just awakening to the unlimited possibilities of this state as an ideal place in which to spend the heated portion of the year. There is no particular part of the state which can be pointed out as exceeding to a large degree all the rest of Michigan. From north to south, from east to west, thousands of inland lakes and streams vie with the coast lines of the Great Lakes region in an inviting appeal to those who would tarry for a while in search of soothing rest and comfort. Michigan invites the entire world to come here and share with us this paradise of summer loveliness.

We know a man who spent his week ends with a Scotch friend and the system got rid of a thirty-pound surplus.

Landlord Likes Children

The most accommodating landlord in Manchester, N. H., is Hugh O'Dowd, according to his tenants. He is remodeling some of his property to accommodate as many as fourteen in a family. He gives discounts on his rent to large families. A 10 per cent reduction is made to families with six children and 25 per cent to families of more.

Negro College in Africa

At Achimota, on the west coast of Africa, the British government has established a negro college for which high hopes are held by those interested in introducing the higher education into the "dark continent." The college is expected to do for the African negroes in some measure what the negro colleges in the southern states have done in America.
