"WHAT ARE WE COMING TO?"
With several Michigan University students under arrest charged with the holdup of a road house at the intersection of Farmington and Plymouth roads in which one person was dangerously wounded and with three youths, still in their teens, charged with banditry and murder at Plymouth, the fourth one of the party, a mere youth, killed by officers while attempting to escape the question: "What are we coming to," is again asked and soon answered by another holdup and murder.

Banditry will appeal to a certain element just so long as it continues to remain comparatively safe. When measures are adopted which will make certain and severe punishment the rule instead of the exception, banditry as we now have it will become exceedingly unpopular with this element.

There is great rejoicing when bandits are killed or apprehended but the final result in many of the cases is a disappointment to the public and an encouragement to the evildoers.

Antiquated criminal procedure and a rotten parole system are to a great extent responsible for the present crime wave. With a change in court procedure and a real parole system that will give some protection to society will come a lessening in crime.

MICHIGAN PAROLE SYSTEM
The Grand Rapids Press has the following to say regarding Michigan's parole system which has been the subject of much criticism during the past two years: "Michigan has a parole system under which numbers of men who should be held for the maximum terms are released to prey upon the people who make no attempt to estimate the comparative incorrigibility of its applicants except by the useless data of their prison record. The parole system in Michigan and most other states may operate to improve the conduct of prisoners in prison and spare wardens trouble. It does not operate for the protection of the public. Any police chief will recall cases in which it has loosed human wolves upon society under the force of the report and 'first friend' system. Our neighbor, Illinois, knows as well that a constant temptation it is to the worst and most dangerous type of political corruption."

Many a leading citizen can gain a morsel of wisdom from the fact that statues on the town square are never erected to the memory of a man whose life was ruled by selfishness.

Who can remember the old days when father was the only one in the family who drank?

MODERN SCIENCE TO AID FARM GATHERING
Standing on a platform under the trees of the Michigan State College campus, speakers at the annual summer Farmers Day at the college will talk to a crowd of thousands. And these speakers will be heard distinctly hundreds of feet from the platform, even though they talk in an ordinary tone of voice.

The latest developments of science will make this possible. Perfectly voiced amplifiers, using the equipment of the college radio station, will carry the words from the speaker's stand out through loud speakers to the gathering throng.

More than 8,000 farmers and their wives gathered for the Farm Day meeting last summer. Without the amplifiers it would have been impossible to hold the big afternoon meeting. No building on the campus would house the crowd, and no public speaker could possibly reach so many people out of doors, without the aid of science.

Band concerts and other special entertainment numbers are to be mixed with the more serious talks on the Farm Day program, which will be held right after the picnic lunch at noon.

NEW JERSEY FARMERS LIKE LOCAL WHEAT
Michigan grown Red Rock wheat seed will be planted rather extensively in eastern states this year, if inquiries coming into the state college here are a good indication.

New Jersey farmers are pooling orders for Michigan Red Rock, which is certified by the state crop improvement association, according to word received here by H. C. Rather, specialist in farm crops at M. S. C. Tests made at the New Jersey Agricultural College have shown Red Rock to be an unusually good yielding in the eastern state. The results is a demand for certified seed of this strain.

Red Rock wheat was developed at the Michigan experiment station, by the late Prof. Frank A. Spragg, plant breeder at the college. It has become recognized as a leading variety not only for Michigan but also for many other sections of the country.

TEN-FOLD INCREASE FOR FARMINGTON HILLS
In an interview in the Detroit Free Press last Sunday Louis Tarabusi, vice president of the Greater Farmington Association said: "Farmington is undergoing a more spacious type of development."
