A change is being made in the classification of the poultry exhibit at the next annual Michigan State Fair which will be held at the State Fair Grounds in Detroit from September 6 to September 11.
Members of the State Fair Board have decided this year to recognize the value of the utility and the production birds, and are offering substantial premiums in these classes.
The size of the premiums will be based on the number of entries in each class.
It is pointed out that the re-classification in these two classes will not effect the regular exhibition classes which will compete as formerly, but for prizes which have been very materially increased for 1926.
This announcement is expected to lead to the entrance of many birds that would otherwise not be exhibited by poultry farmers of Michigan.

Sponge Really Part of Animal Kingdom

Many surprising facts are encountered by the person who becomes interested in the study of animal life. One of the hardest things to believe is that the sponge you use daily was once an animal and not a vegetable growth of the ocean. Sponges live their own lives and eat their food as other animals do, says Lester Eubanks in Our Dumb Animals.

The separate existence of a sponge begins with the breaking away from the parent of a tiny particle. The latter, after being whirled about for a time by the tides and currents, eventually attaches itself to a piece of rock, and from that home it seeks its own livelihood.

The food of infant sponges consists of yolk cells, which contain a form of nourishment. Later, as the sponge grows, it requires something more solid, and this is brought by the currents, which sweep into a bag, half mouth, half stomach, minute particles of the new food.

Six Dollars

A sailor with six dollars in his pocket fought two armed hold-up men rather than give it up. One broke his nose with a revolver butt. But the sailor retained his six dollars. Was his action a display of courage or foolhardiness? Is six dollars worth the risk of your life? He took that risk. The most interesting point is unknown. What did he do with the six dollars after he saved it at this risk? If we knew that we might answer the questions. All dislike to be cheated. We feel the loss when we are robbed. But many willing to risk their lives to save six dollars, or less, by robbery, will turn right around and so waste it that they might better have been robbed of it.—New Orleans Item.
