WEST POINT PARK

Rev. George Gullen will speak next Sunday on "The Man That Nobody Knows." The topic for the children is "Too Much Candy." Parents come and bring your children, little folks come and bring your parents.

Rev. Lester Ault of Venita, Penn., is expected home for the Christmas week to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ault. Mr. J. W. Ault has been on the sick list for some time. If Rev. Ault does come he will be asked to preach a Christmas sermon at West Point Park.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Owens and family are staying out here with Mrs. Owens's sister, Mrs. Austin Ault. The Owens expect to build in the spring.

The Ladies Community Club met at the home of Mrs. B. C. Thomas Wednesday afternoon with a large turnout. The ladies came prepared for sewing and accomplished a great deal, in fact made over quite a few old garments.

Miss Esther Middlewood of Ann Arbor was home for the week end. A shower was given Miss Cochran, the helping teacher of Pierion School, Tuesday evening.

Miss Ernestine Wolfe who has been sick with tonsillitis, returned to school Wednesday morning at Northville High.

Our Christmas entertainment Thursday evening, December 23 at 8 p. m. in our Community Hall. You must be early, so that Santa Claus will not miss you.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hill and son William spent the week end at Marine City.

We, at last have an organized Bible class in our community. Lloyd Gullen is teacher. Officers as follows: President, Mrs. John Mercer; Vice president, Mrs. C. Taylor; Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. Wm. Zwalen. Our aim is to get at least a hundred members, so come and join us.

Judging from the way the Democrats are starting senatorial investigations, one is apt to get the impression that only the Republicans are sharing in this present-day prosperity.

The House That Larry Built

BY JANE OSBORN

Nearly all the other teachers in Larry's school had gone abroad for the summer vacation, but Polly had bought a little reader instead. And now it was nearly the first of September and she felt somewhat at it. She hadn't had quite such a satisfactory vacation as she had hoped.

Now she stood in Larry Blair's garage while a mechanic crept under her little car to see just why it was that the engine had begun to pound so hard that she had stopped here for help.

An idle-looking young man waiting for his car was talking to the six-foot, gray-eyed man in overalls whom the others referred to as "boss."

"Nice house you're building next door," observed the waiting young man. "What's your idea?"

Polly was suddenly met by those of the gray-eyed young man. He smiled in a most friendly manner and Polly smiled back. "I don't know just what I shall do," said he. "If my girl has just the thing I'll marry and settle down. But if my girl won't have me, then I'll sell it."

"Asked here?" queried the other. "Not in so many words," returned Larry, the boy's eyes on the mechanic. "But I don't want the house. What do you want to offer me for it?"

The idling one made no offer and the subject of conversation was changed. Just then the mechanic got out from under Polly's car and told her he thought everything was all right and she could pay the boss. She started to pay Larry.

"Wait," said Larry, handing back the money. "Maybe I'd better try that car myself." Larry was in the car and had driven it a few feet out of the garage when it stopped and appeared to have some difficulty. Larry reached it into the garage. "There's something special that car needs," he said. "It won't cost any more—but it needs a new part."

Polly was distressed. "Dear me," she said, "I'm ten miles away from home." "It happens that I am going along that way," said Larry. "Maybe you'd like to drive my house."

So it was that Polly drove ten miles over the highway with Larry. Larry never spent so much time on ten miles before in his life. He apologized, saying that there was something the matter with his car. "I don't mind in the least," said Polly. "I have been enjoying the scenery."

"So have I," said the bold Larry, looking into Polly's pretty face. The next morning Larry brought back Polly's car.

"How are you going to get back?" Polly answered and Larry told her that he'd spent the night on the highway and get a lift from some truck or other. That is why she felt it was her real duty to take Larry back again to his garage.

The scenery is even more beautiful to look at today than it was yesterday," said Larry. Then said Polly: "It will be very convenient for you, living there right beside your garage. The house is nearly done—you'll soon be moving in, I suppose."

"That depends on the girl," said Larry wistfully. "I'm sure you and she ought to be very happy," said Polly. "That is to say—the house looks so convenient, and I'm sure it would be very nice living so near one's place of business. I cannot imagine a girl changing her mind after she has been given you her word, or at least made you think she'd marry you. You see I overheard what you were telling that man in the garage yesterday."

"Is that so?" exclaimed Larry. "Well, I oughtn't to be so careless about how I tell secrets." They had reached the garage and Larry could think of no excuse to detain the little school teacher. But the teacher detained herself.

"You don't mind my looking through the house," she asked. "I'm so fond of new houses."

Larry insisted on accompanying her. "It is a neat little place, isn't it?" he said, looking down at Polly as they stood in the middle of the perfectly equipped little kitchen. "But I'm not going to let the girl I marry wait before I get to work. I'm going to keep a cook for her."

"If she really loved you she wouldn't mind cooking for you," said Polly. "If she didn't really love me," repeated Larry, looking sadly about. "How I wish I knew!"

"Why don't you ask her?" ventured Polly, and then the realization that this big man, Larry, was trying to make love to her came rushing upon her. She didn't have time to think it all out—whether it would be possible for her—well-bred school teacher—to marry a man who beguiled his hands with the grease of automobiles. But when Larry went toward her with pleading, outstretched arms she met him half way.

CLARENCEVILLE

The Edgewood Rebekah Sewing Circle, No. 290, wish to thank the merchants of Redford, Farmington and Clarenceville who donated so liberally to their bazaar and supper.

A large number attended the pageant, "The Challenge of the Cross" put on by seven ladies of Farmington, M. E. Church and were simply rapt for their attendance. Mr. MacDonald, soloist of the Westlawn Church gave two selections which were enjoyed by all. The Rev. Bruce Davis of Wyandotte was also present.

Mr. and Mrs. Routon of Plymouth spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shaw.

Mr. and Mrs. Wanger of Detroit attended the bazaar Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Valentine and son Charles of Royal Oak and Miss Kirk of Detroit were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Barnes.

The Ladies Aid bazaar held at the church Friday evening proved a great success. Supper was served by the young people from 6:30 on. One of the main attractions was the beauty parade in charge of Miss W. Blakemore and Miss B. Carl. Mrs. Green and Miss M. Ross of the Grand River Hair Shoppe, Redford, donated their services for the evening, men and women both taking advantage of the opportunity to be made beautiful.

Miss Winnifred Chamberlain was dinner guest of Miss Gladys Baker, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Robinson entertained the M. E. Church choir at their home on Middle Belt road, Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Durham are the proud parents of a daughter, Marie Belle, born last Saturday morning.

The Clarenceville I. O. O. F., No. 427 elected the following new officers: Noble Grand, Herbert Dusha; Vice Grand, Norman Cook; Recording Secretary, Archie Rolf; Financial Secretary, Willis T. Roberts; Treasurer, Fred Newman; Trustee, Oscar Reed.

The Bachelors' Christmas

ALICE B. PALMER

IT WAS just a few days before the great holiday and a delightful snow storm was in progress. The wind as it whistled past the windows of the grand and glorious "Christmas Split."

The most prosperous Christmas in many a year had struck Cedar Junction. Happy, snow-bedecked crowds swarmed the downtown district abuzz with glimmering lights and decorative displays.

Perhaps old Silas, who lived on the rural route just outside of town, was the only human being to whom Christmas meant nothing. He had been separated from everyone who had ever been dear to him, and as the years slipped by he had grown stranger and more estranged.

Now, it seems there were several social clubs in Cedar Junction and on Christmas time they all did their bit toward making everyone happy.

But Silas had always been forgotten. No one seemed to ever think of making him happy.

This year a new member had entered the Men's Card club, one Joseph Bartlett, an extremely fine fellow all around, who was always suggesting something new and original.

At their final meeting before Christmas, when all had been satisfactorily arranged, 'twas Joseph who smilingly arose, filled to the brim with the Christmas spirit and made the following motion:

"Say, boys! How about making 'Old Silas' on the rural route, happy this Christmas?"

At first there was a dead silence. Every one was too shocked to speak. But when the idea finally dawned upon them, all seconded the motion. In the midst of the other celebrations, the "Happy Twelve" of the card club were busy making preparations for the call on St. They trimmed a small table, two dollars, with "Silas" inscribed on a huge star at its peak. Then they prepared a cherry punch, purchased a super-box of excellent cigars and called forth headed by Joseph, the happy who was thoughtful enough to slip a deck of cards into his coat pocket besides.

Thus, about 9 p. m. and St. had retired as usual, at an early hour, when there came a loud knock upon his door.

"Jumping out of bed with a thump, he roared: 'Who's there?' " "Merry Christmas," shouted the club.

"Well, what of it?" cried Silas. "We have come to celebrate with you. Let us in."

"What do you mean, you band of scoundrels? Get out of here before I call the police."

The others were ready to see for their lives, but Joseph was not to be put off so easily. Then came the big surprise.

"Sil, don't you remember your brother, Joseph, whom you thought to be dead? 'Tis I! For God's sake open the door!"

With a crash, the door was swung open and the brothers were in each other's arms as tears streamed down the cheeks of Old Sil, but they were Christmas tears of joy.

Then followed such a celebration as Cedar Junction had never beheld. All who named the little house wondered why the lights at Old Sil's place were burning all night. But the biggest shock of all was when they actually saw a sparkling Christmas tree in the window.

"Severe headaches, pain over hips and in my side, dizziness, floating specks, irregular, painful bladder action, was relieved by Foley's, a diuretic stimulant for the kidneys, gave me prompt, comforting and permanent relief."

Dec 2-16

ORDINANCE No. C-5-26

An Ordinance to provide for street numbering and for the changing of the names of certain streets.

The City of Farmington ordains:

1st: That each dwelling, store or other building, occupying frontage on any street in the City of Farmington shall be required to have numbers affixed on or before August 1, 1927.

2nd: The numbers shall be of standard size and plain design chosen by the city and shall be placed on building in a location easily seen from the street. The numbers will be furnished and placed by the city, but property owners may secure them elsewhere.

3rd: That the street now known as Division street be renamed Farmington road.

4th: That the street now known as Rogers street be renamed Oakland avenue.

5th: That Grand River avenue and Farmington road, formerly called Division street, will be the base lines for numbering all streets. The numbers on through streets crossing Grand River avenue shall be designated as North or South and on through streets crossing Farmington road as East or West from said base lines.

6th: On streets north of Grand River avenue the odd numbers will be on the west side of the street and the even numbers on the east side of the street. On streets south of Grand River avenue the reverse of the above arrangement will be used. On all streets east of Farmington road the odd numbers will be used on the North side of the street and the even numbers on the South side.

On streets west of Farmington road the reverse arrangement will be used.

7th: The first numbers on each street will be 101 or 102 and will increase, in a direction, from the base lines. The numbers will be consecutive in so far as is possible until a street intervenes.

8th: The numbers after crossing and intervening street will begin with the first numbers of the ensuing hundred. Numbers opposite each other will be kept as nearly equal as possible, numbers being dropped on curved streets or angles when necessary.

9th: Each ten lineal feet of street frontage will receive a number but any fraction of ten feet shall be considered as being included in the preceding number.

10th: The Superintendent of Public Works will put the numbering system into effect.

Wells D. Butterfield, Mayor. N. H. Power, Clerk.

NOTICE NOTICE is hereby given that a petition has been filed with the Clerk of the Circuit Court for the County of Oakland, State of Michigan, praying for the vacation of all that part of Fred M. Warner's Addition to Farmington Village in the Northeast quarter of Section 28, Town 1 North, Range 9 East, Oakland County, Michigan, which lies South of Macomb street, extended, and being lots 43 to 59 inclusive and that portion of Cass avenue lying South of Macomb street, and that an application founded on the said petition will be made to the said Court at the Court House in the City of Pontiac, on Monday, the 24th day of January A. D. 1927, for an order vacating said plot, at which time and place any person owning any part of the said Township of Farmington, or the said Village, now City of Farmington, immediately adjoining that part thereof which it is proposed to vacate, may appear and oppose the same.

Dated: December 22, 1926. Howard M. Warner, Harley D. Warner, Trustees of the estate of Fred M. Warner, deceased.
