FRESHENING BREEZES

Now that we are able to hold telephone conversations with Europe, will somebody think to call up some morning and find out what has become of all the crowd that cheered so loud the day that Pershing said, "Lafayette, we are here?"

In spite of every effort to preserve the fish, the state police still persist in dumping captured booze into the first stream that comes handy.

Men of Real Worth Careful of Sarcasm

"Use sarcasm on anyone else in the world," said a mother the other day, "but don't use it on your children."

This is excellent advice as far as the injunction not to be sarcastic to children goes, but poor advice if it bids you be sarcastic to others.

Most clever persons are endowed with the ability to use sarcasm, but wise persons use it in ordinary conversation as they would use firearms, only when other means of self-defense have failed.

Almost all great preachers and teachers have indulged in sarcasm. From the words of Christ you will find some of the most poignant bits of sarcasm. Buddha and Mohamet and the Hebrew prophets were occasionally sarcastic—but it was only when they were hard pressed by those who opposed them, never when they wished to give instruction or correction to simple folk or those whose allegiance they already possessed.

There is really no place for sarcasm in ordinary social conversation. To use it would be like using an unguarded foil in a fencing bout.

Electricity in Orchards

Orchards are sprayed by electric power in the great fruit country of the Pacific coast. Ninety-seven motorized spraying outfits averaged $2 per acre of spraying cost, during the early part of this summer, Harry L. Garver of the Washington committee on the relation of electricity to agriculture reported. About 1,000 such spraying outfits were in use by the middle of the summer.
