ELECTRICAL EXHIBIT IN DETROIT

An electrical exhibit and demonstration, which will probably continue indefinitely, opened in The Michigan Theatre Building, Detroit, on Wednesday, December 15. The exhibit includes all types of electrical heating, refrigerating, cooking, cleaning and beautifying household appliances. From time to time special demonstrations and talks will be given on the uses of various appliances, and the exhibits will be varied in order to bring out interesting and useful points. The demonstration is sponsored by The Detroit Edison Company, The Electrical Extension Bureau, and the Electrical Manufacturers, and is purely educational. The public is invited to avail itself of this opportunity to become familiar with the uses of the many electrical devices which have been developed to economically perform what are otherwise burdensome and tiring household tasks—appliances you now own or those you are interested in. Visitors at the exhibition are free to browse about as suits their fancy—there is no obligation—nothing to sign—nothing is sold, for there is nothing to sell. The exhibit will be open every day except Sunday, including Saturday afternoons.
