THE DEMOCRATIC idea is to distribute the power among all members of the family. In theory this is an excellent idea. But evidence is accumulating that in practice it will not work, because differentiation of roles is essential to good family functioning. He continues:

"All cannot be treated as equals, because in fact they are not so. A man and a woman may be equal as persons in society. But as husband and wife, they are different and complementary; the concept of equality is meaningless here. A parent and a child simply cannot be equal, because the child needs the protective authority of his parents to give him the security without which he cannot grow healthily into an adult."

By DR. ALFRED J. PRINCE

What is happening to the family? Is it deteriorating? Has it become too democratic? In the past 75 years the American family has changed considerably. A list of some of the more important family changes would include: increasing divorce rate and changing attitudes toward divorce; decline in the authority of husbands and fathers; increase in the number of wives in the labor force; increase in premarital sex relations; increasing individualism and freedom of family members; decline in the size of the family; transfer of protective, productive, educational, religious, and recreational functions; and wider diffusion of birth control.

SPECIALISTS who have studied family life admit that the family is changing profoundly, but they do not agree on what it is becoming or where it ought to go from here.

One point of view holds that many of the above changes are signs of decay in the American family and that the family is likely to collapse in the not too distant future. Others would argue that the family is not really disintegrating but simply changing its form and values to keep up with the permanent changes taking place in our society.

THEY say there is a great deal of disagreement among the experts as to where the American family is going next, most of them agree that the family is changing profoundly, but they do not agree on what it is becoming or where it ought to go from here.

Bride's Uncles Assist In Marriage Ceremony

Kathryn Lee Hennicken married Arthur Frederick Lampe in the Covenant Community Church, Redford.

The wedding was performed by the Rev. Douglas Couch, pastor of the church. He was assisted by the Rev. John Drummond, another uncle, the Rev. Norman Sanders, served as soloist.

GIVEN IN marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-skirted gown of tulle and lace. Her hair was styled in a bouffant. She carried a bouquet of white carnations.

Her maid of honor, Paula Pritchett, of Trenton wore a floor-length A-line gown of peach chiffon. The bridesmaids wore matching accessories and carried tangerine carnations.

JANICE HENNICKEN, sister of the bride, Barbara Alwin and Ruthann Ludwig served as bridesmaids. Their gowns were similar to the maid of honor's, in avocado green, and they carried bouquets of yellow carnations.

GEORGE PARSONS served as best man. The ushers were Jim Foster, of New York; Richard Meuleveldt and Paul Henrich, brother of the bride.

David Hennicken, younger brother of the bride, was ring bearer and Michele Barnes, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl.

Mrs. Hennicken wore an apple green, two-piece silk sheath with jeweled neckline and matching accessories. She carried a sheath of imported champagne nylon, with beaded trim and beige accessories.

A reception for 180 guests was held in the church immediately following the ceremony.
