

Crusading angels oversee MCF benefit

CRUSADING ANGELS: "It is said that angels come as thoughts, as visions, as dreams, as the light on the water or in clouds and rainbows and in people, too," Sophy Burnham, "A Book of Angels."

Six years ago Paul and Helen Zuckerman held the first Angels dinner in their Franklin home and asked their guests for "substantial" donations for the Michigan Cancer Foundation. Ten days before that first dinner, Paul Zuckerman discovered he had cancer and four months later he lost his battle with this deadly disease. Through the dedicated effort of Helen Zuckerman, the seventh annual Angels dinner took place on Oct. 19 at the Ritz-Carlton in Dearborn. Nearly 200 people attended making their continued "substantial" donation of $2,000 per couple toward cancer research.

The list of Detroit's most prominent philanthropists attending the Angels gala was up 25 percent from last year. Attendees were Nancy and Thomas Angotti, Orchard Lake; Robert and Betty Jean Awrey, Farmington Hills; Stuart Gorlick, West Bloomfield; Lucille and Hiram Dorfman, Farmington Hills; Bonnie Peersman, West Bloomfield, who was involved in the recent Columbus Day party for the under "40" crowd fund raising for MCF at the Rooter-tail.

field couture shop owner Bettina Fealey with love interest Jack Goff of Farmington Hills, John Bloom of Southfield, Dr. William and Florise Mark Ross of Farmington Hills, Isadore Winkelman of West Bloomfield.

Other names to drop included Don and Jody Peterson, Norbert Zuckerman, Helen's son who flew in from singer and songwriter, as he dedicated the song honoring Helen Zuckerman.

REACHING FOR A STAR: Oct. 15 was a triple celebration for Lee and Darlene Iacocca; the dedication of the Chrysler Technology Center in Auburn Hills (a billion dollar project for Chrysler); Lee's birthday, and a fund-raising soiree for STAR (science, technology, and reading) a new "Reading is Fundamental" (RIF) program.

Lee Iacocca is dedicated to the RIF organization, looking at America's young people as the Chrysler employees of tomorrow.

More than 500 attended the extravagant gala which included a tour of the technology plaza, design court and studios and an extravagant STAR Night reception in the Chrysler Education Center.

Darlene, looking elegant in a classic black dress, charmed the guests with her commitment to charities for children, acknowledging Detroit as her new "home," introducing her husband as the real speech maker in the family.

Spotted in the crowd was daughter Lisa Iacocca who resides in California. Lisa was with her business partner from New York, Todd DeMann. They oversee Iacocca-DeMann Promotions and are working on projects for cable TV and financial networking.

Other notables included Red Pollock, Heinz and Wally Preeter, Ralph and Janice Nichols, Tom and Karen Clark, Terry and John Rakolita.

DRILLING LUNCHEON: The Detroit Auxiliary of Alpha Omega Dental Fraternity (spouses of area Jewish Dentists) held their annual luncheon honoring new members at Pike Street restaurant in Pontiac. During the luncheon an informal fashion show coordinated by Vicki Howard was featured from Bette Appel, Herch's, Marguerite's, Zeta, Begadim, Cecil's and Betteon all located on the Boardwalk in West Bloomfield.

Spotted at the luncheon were Toby Pollack, interior designer, West Bloomfield; Julie Shifman of Farmington Hills, Gail Finn, West Bloomfield, president Debbie Luria, Bluma Siegal Farmington Hills, Hella Stelberg, and past president Stella Morof.
