

By Pat Murphy
staff writer

game mentioned that all-star running back Barry Sanders is enrolled at OU hoping to earn credits toward a degree.

The announcer said Sanders was intent on the game, eventually lost by the Lions, 41-10. He also mentioned Sanders was concerned about a biology quiz on Tuesday.

"That's when Profachof realized, 'If he's in his class,' she shouted to her fiancée, John Grubbs, and others attending a football party in Troy.

As it turned out, neither Sanders, Profachof nor any of the other students in the class needed to worry — at least about Tuesday. That quiz was postponed because of the snowstorm, like most other activities scheduled at OU.

"I suppose we'll have it Thursday," Profreich said.

SANDERS, 23, was a junior when he left Oklahoma State University, after winning college football's most prestigious prize, the Helmsman Trophy, to pursue a multimillion dollar career in pro football.

Sanders is currently listed as a junior at OU where he is presumably heeding his father's advice that a college degree is important to selfbrook who teaches Sanders and more than 100 other students in the class.

"But I don't expect any disruptions," said Clampitt, who is not a sports fan and watched Sunday's game only because of his low-profile, but highly publicized student.

"The name was familiar when I was going over the class roster," said Clampitt of Auburn Hills. "But I didn't recognize the name."

THAT CHANGED Thursday when he got a call from the OU public relations office asking if he'd mind

Enrolled in another session of the same biology class is one of Sanders' teammates, star receiver Willie Green, who left the University of Mississippi to play pro football. Green's instructor, John Cowlishaw, is a football fan and said he

He didn't mention, however, anything about extra credit.

The popular health and nutrition program Just for Women will begin a winter segment Tuesday at the Meadow Brook Health Enhancement Institute at Oakland University in Rochester.

A health and personal development seminar tailored to the special needs of women is one example of a single-sex program that makes sense, MJHEI personnel say.

The sessions run from 6:15-8:30 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from Jan. 21 through March 26.

Those interested are invited to call L. E. Smith at 313-370-4523 or 313-370-1198. The cost is $200 for non-members, $185 for members and $75 for OU graduates.

A Grand Celebration For Doll Lovers

20% OFF
On 100% Of Dolls
Ends Feb. 1, 1992*

Madame Alexander	Roxie Woods
Coralle	Effanbee
Galzi	Giang
Middleline	Antiques

The Doll Hospital & Toy Selection Shop

3947 W. 12 Mile • Borkley • 543-3115

[illegible]