

Commission is willing to answer questions

This month I had the privilege of speaking to the Farmington Exchange Club. The room was filled with professional men and women who work and live in the Farmington community.

My talk was to respond to their questions about "What is the Southwestern Oakland Cable Commission?" As the cable industry and other communication business continues to receive more and more media coverage, I find that the consumer are also becoming remarkably sophisticated in their knowledge. The questions posed to me during my time with the Exchange Club were a perfect example.

With a history of 67 years this civic service club has a membership of 50 professionals who are very progressive thinkers.

The following is a recap of some of the areas discussed (your group may want to ask your own questions):

- The commission's role as governing authority overseeing the cable commission.
- Who is active in the organizational structure.
- How each business may offer its employees free education.
- An introduction to television shows sponsored by the business and/or organizations.
- What the legislature is working through as it pertains to communications.

- FCC discussion.
- Our cable complaint department and how MetroVision and S.W.O.C.C. interact to resolve consumer concerns.
