Gill parking ban back in effect

Watch where you park on Gill Road.

The city of Farmington has put back into effect a ban on parking along the east side of the road, from Grand River to Freedom, according to public safety Director Frank Laubhoff.

Parking had been allowed along the main, residential thoroughfare while the Greenery Care Center at the corner of Gill and Grand River was doing renovation and construction of their business. As of Tuesday, the parking rules went back into effect.

Construction on the project apparently took longer than anticipated, Laubhoff said.

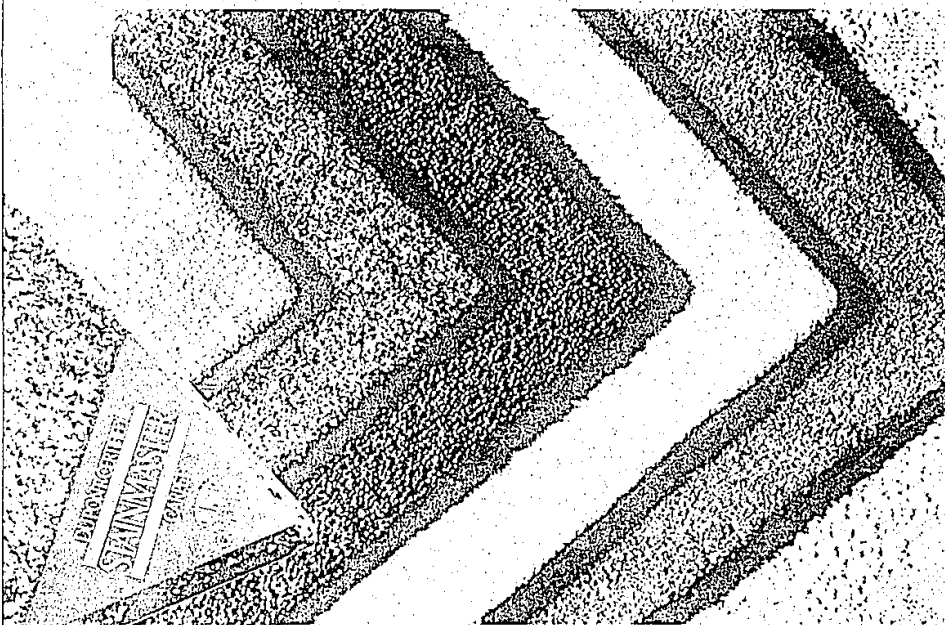

The city's Traffic and Safety Board is also reviewing parking complaints regarding Earl Court, a street just off of Gill to the south of Greenery. City officers will observe the Gill and Earl Court areas for several weeks, then recommend any signage which appears to be necessary. The next board meeting is scheduled for Thursday, June 18.

Residents appeared at a recent Traffic and Safety Board meeting to voice their concerns with parking in the residential areas, saying they wanted something done.
