'True Colors' dad dead?; Pauly has a buhh-dy

By Taylor Michaels

Q: What happened to the first has-band on Fox's True Colors? Did he die? Cleavon Little took his place. I'm so concerned. -Inis Jones, Gary, Ind. A: No. actor Frankie Faison, who played patriarch Ron Freeman, hasn't died. The show's press contact offers little in the way of explanation for Faison's departure, which is generally the case in situations like this, other than to say "Mr. Faison has gone on to other endeavors."

Q! I was wondering if you could give me the address of David Lascher, who plays Ted on Nickelodeon's Hey Dude, -Jennifer Compton, Walnut-Ridge,

A: You may write to Lascher in care of Hey Dude, Nickelodeon, 1515 Broadway, New York, N.Y., 10036.

Q: At least 15 years ago, I watched a TV: show on a Sunday evening — I don't know if it was movie or a documentary. It was about the first Olympic Games in which a United States team participated. The athletes traveled by boat, were late and were not expected to win in any events but ended up whinling several. I enjoyed it very much and would like to see it again.

Can you shed any light on the name of the program and if it is available on video? No one else I've talked to seems to have seen it, and I am beginning to wonder if it does exist. —Catal Demert, Janesville, Minn.

A: First, the bad news: The movie you mention, The First Olympics: Athens, 1896, is not available on home

The good news is that, if you or someone you know subscribes to The Disney Channel, you will be able to catch the 1984 miniseries in the channel's two-part showing on the evenings of Wednesday, July 22, and Thursday, July 23. The movie, starring Angela Lansbury and Louis Jourdan, is guaranteed to whet the appetites of all the red-blooded, flag-waving sports painots across the country, who, like yourself, can't wait for this year's Barcelona Games to begin a few days later. Set your VCR.
