

Camp shares Hispanic culture

A bilingual and bicultural Confeiti Camp takes place 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday through Aug. 20 at the Creative Arts Center, 47 Williams in Pontiac.

This summer camp allows Hispanic children ages 4 to 15 to explore Hispanic traditions, changes and the roles Hispanic women play in society. Children in this program experience theater, dance and visual arts.

For more information, call Angela

Petroff at 333-7849 Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday.

The camp is sponsored by the Puerto Rican Cultural and Educational Center in cooperation with the Creative Arts Center and the Pontiac Area Urban League. The Puerto Rican Cultural and Educational Center has made this camp possible through partial funding from the Michigan Educational Opportunity Fund, Hudson Target stores and the Michigan Council for the Arts and Cultural Affairs.

Volunteers support art festival

Eight area business and volunteer groups have signed up to work during the Sept. 12-13 Art 'n Apples Festival at Rochester Municipal Park.

Employees or members of Comerica Bank, Crittenton Hospital, First of America Bank, Huntington Bank, Jacobson's J-Teens, Rochester Junior Woman's Club, Sherwood Forest Homeowners and Xenadu Beauty Salon will sell food, T-shirts and posters during the two-day outdoor art fair.

Many of these volunteers will support their company or organization T-shirt during the festival to highlight their group's participation in this community event.

Art 'n Apples is one of the oldest and largest art fairs in Michigan, featuring 275 artists, performing artists and musicians, children's art activities and refreshments.

Volunteer groups and individuals are still needed to work in three-hour shifts at Art 'n Apples, particularly on Sunday, Sept. 13. Call the PCCA at 651-4110 between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday.

"I have my eye on a wild rose on Franklin Road. I'm waiting for it to flower."

Some of her wildflower finds are on exhibit at the Tamarack Gallery in Omena, north of Traverse City.

"Her work is detailed and very well done in that tradition of doing accurate botanical paintings," said gallery owner Sally Viskochil. Although she began painting flowers three years ago, Pedersen's love of plants goes back to her childhood when her father kept a garden. When her husband presented her with a book of botanical prints, she started thinking about painting the entire plant.

Using watercolor made her want to paint tight, controlled pictures. But she came to watercolors only when the turquoise she used to paint in oils began to elicit an allergic reaction. As a child, her first art lessons involved oil paints.

At different points in her life she has taken classes at Center for Creative Studies and the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association. When her three sons were grown, she decided to use the time to resume painting.

Now, when the wildflowers she loves aren't in bloom, she focuses on painting still life and teaching at the Paint Creek Center for the Arts in Rochester.

"She works very well with students. She's a very giving person," said Betty Ruedisuel of the PCCA.

Pedersen is known for teaching her students how to present their works for public exhibition. Ruedisuel said.

But she won't be around the PCCA for the next few months. "I'm not teaching this summer — too many flowers to paint," she said.

Garden tour slated

The Natural Areas Department of the University of Michigan-Dearborn will host the annual tour of its community organic garden Saturday, Aug. 1.

A free 90-minute program will begin at 10 a.m. Focus will be the work accomplished in the children's garden area, a product of the Sprouts gardening program offered May through October for 7- and 8-year-olds.

Children from Sprouts will show their garden plots to visitors and explain what they've learned about stewardship of the earth by participating in the program.

Michael Hayes, Natural Areas Department supervisor and community organic garden director, will discuss how organic methods the children have used can be incorporated into backyard gardening efforts.

Included in the program will be dedication of a new equipment shed in the garden. The shed is being built with an $862 gift to the Sprouts program from the Junior League of Detroit. The contribution covers the cost of new gardening tools for children's use.

The community organic garden is at the north end of the UM-Dearborn campus, Evergreen between Ford Road and Michigan Avenue. Call 593-5338.
