ONE PTA paid for the set of books for a child who could not purchase his own. Others provided baby sitters for the leaders while they led the discussions and some have IN FEBRUARY, 28 more Volunteers completed a four-volunteers completed a four-volunteers completed a four-veek training dourse discussions and some have presented by the Great Plooks deveted time at their monthly Foundation with the teacher sant from the foundation of these in Chicago.

With the addition of these new leaders, programs can be capanded in some of the schools with existing the special program of the schools with existing the special program of the council.

Cooperation on the part of the school principals and other school personnel has been excellent. However, the real success of the program can be seen by talking with the children involved, or visiting a discussion group in action.

"Seeing the enthusiasm, and by observing that the participants really are learning to think, without realizing; it, makes being a leader most worthwhile," comments Mrs. Justice.
