Tim Burton, the visionary director responsible for the heavily stylized films Beetlejuice, Edward Scissorhands and the Batman movies, began his career with a featurette titled Frankenweenie. The story concerns Sparky, the pit bullterrier of 10-year-old Victor Frankenstein. When the sweet-natured pup is run over by a car, his young master endeavors to revive him using a toaster and a microwave. The darkly comic short, starring Barrett Oliver, Shelley Duvall, Daniel Stern and Paul Bartel, makes its TV debut on The Disney Channel Sunday, Oct. 18.

Star-crossed lovers are caught in the violence of Northern Ireland in the romantic thriller The Railway Station Man, a TNT original movie debuting on Sunday. Donald Sutherland and Julie Christie (reunited on film for the first time since 1973's Don't Look Now) star, respectively, as a reclusive eccentric dedicated to restoring an abandoned railway station and the widowed artist with whom he becomes involved.
