Crash into median wall kills Lake Odessa man

A 59-year-old Lake Odessa, Mich., man died following an accident Thursday morning on I-696 about 200 feet east of the Middlebelt overpass in Farmington Hills.

Donald Orr Haney died from injuries after the cement-front truck he was driving crashed into a median retaining wall at about 6:05 a.m., State Police Trooper Mark Timney of the Northville post said.

Witnesses told police a Ford Ranger pickup, driven by Timothy Glenn Foss, 23, of South Lyon, tried to avoid rear-ending the truck driven by Haney, lost control and swerved around in front of the truck, striking the truck and sending both vehicles into the median wall while traveling east on I-696. The impact sent Haney and two passengers flying out of the passenger door of the truck, on to the shoulder of the westbound left lane.

Haney was taken to Botsford Hospital in Farmington Hills where he died a short time later. One of Haney's passengers, Jose Zamora, 50, of Detroit, was taken to Providence Hospital in Southfield where he was admitted. The other passenger, Virgilio Vasquez, 29, also of Detroit, was taken to Providence, treated and released. Foss escaped with no injuries.

The truck suffered heavy damage, the pickup suffered some damage.

Traffic was reduced to one lane each way until about 9 a.m., Timney said. The accident remains under investigation.

ASSAULT AND BATTERY

An Orchard Lake Road attorney filed a complaint against a Novi client with Farmington police after an office altercation Tuesday afternoon.

After resolution of a driving without a license charge, the man was upset about the outcome and demanded a copy of his driving record returned to him. The attorney refused explaining that he needed the record for his file and research.

The client grabbed the attorney by the right arm, with one hand against his chest and forcefully shoved the attorney back away from the desk. The client grabbed his driving record and left.

PAIN AND SWELLING

When joints are swollen, they are not necessarily painful. The reverse is also true: a joint can look perfectly normal at a time it is causing you intense distress.

Joint swelling and pain are in step when the swelling occurs suddenly. Swelling represents the accumulation of fluid in a joint; if the fluid flows in quickly, the joint capsule must distend rapidly. The sudden stretch affects the joint as if it were placed on a medieval rack.

In contrast, if the irritation is slight but sufficient to cause the joint to react, you may have a slow increase in fluid. The site would have time to adjust; you could develop large amounts of fluid so gradually you would not feel the need to seek medical attention. You can have a great deal of damage to a joint with continual pain, and yet have no swelling. A typical instance is a ligament tear in a knee or ankle, or a shoulder rotator cuff tear. The makeup of joints includes not only tissue but nerve endings. In the case of injury, nerve endings are irritated by stretching or direct damage and express their disruption by signals you receive as pain.

Physicians experienced in arthritis do not need to see evidence of swelling to appreciate that your joints hurt badly. The features and pattern of onset often provide the information as to why you are in pain and indicate what treatment is in order.
