License plates could say 'overweight state'

We've known it for several years: Michigan has one of the highest death rates from heart disease in the nation. And now, more bad news. Recently, the Michigan Department of Public Health released the findings of their latest behavioral risk factor survey. The survey measures self-reported lifestyle habits and characteristics that place Michigan residents at increased risk of poor health outcomes. Unfortunately, many of our lifestyle habits have gotten worse since the state health department first began studying them in 1987.

According to the most recent telephone survey of 2,400 Michiganders 18 and older, 77 percent of the state's adult population have at least one of the major risk factors for heart disease: cigarette smoking, high blood pressure, elevated cholesterol or physical inactivity.

Survey findings showed that 29 percent of Michigan residents are "overweight," that is, they exceed the upper weight range in federal guidelines. This compares with a national average of 23 percent.

The increased prevalence of pot-bellied and pear-shaped persons in Michigan has state officials concerned. Obesity is directly related to several "chronic health problems," including heart disease, breathing difficulties, diabetes, high blood pressure, brittle bones, digestive complaints, and certain types of cancer.

Why are so many Michigan residents overweight? Although no one knows for sure, there are several possible reasons. Some speculate that perhaps we're trying to eat our way out of poor economic times.

The survey, however, revealed some good news. More Michigan residents than ever before are using their seat belts, not drinking and driving, and getting their cholesterol tested.

Research needs volunteers

William Beaumont Hospital in Birmingham is looking for volunteers with high blood pressure for two research studies of blood pressure medication.

One of the studies combines a low-sodium diet with a new drug to lower blood pressure. The second study compares two different blood pressure medications. Volunteers must participate in several 24-hour ambulatory blood pressure monitoring sessions. Call 646-8158 to volunteer.

Learn to manage kids better

An Oakland University Continuum Center seminar called "Parents Managing Crisis: Eight Steps to Helping a Child in Trouble" will occur 7-10 p.m. Tuesday on campus.

Participants will learn what's at the core of every crisis. Fee is $39 for individuals. $68 for married couples. Registration deadline is Friday. Call 370-3033.
