1. "All allocations must be based on the need of the school district as well as an understanding of the accomplishments of the educational institutional. In many instances money is not allocated by these criteria but rather by political pressure or by the illusion that some newly devised educational program will solve all problems."

2. "I believe that certain funds which are now allocated to some state projects should be cut back. If this is done then more tax money can be given directly to local communities to help them in solving their problems. In most instances the individual community can solve its own problem providing that the legislature assists in a financial way."

2. "These problems must be solved at the local level where they are clearly understood. Our job is to see that they have the proper tools and assistance to solve them, which goes even beyond supplying funds."

Blaine Gets Gas

When it looked as though Republican James G. Blaine would be nominated by acclamation in 1876, his opponents put off the vote by cutting a basement gas main, causing lights in the convention hall to go dead. Next day, enthusiasm for Blaine had died, too. Rutherford Hayes became the man of the hour.
