

FHS Latin Club Elects Officers, Plans Banquet

This year's Latin Club officers at Farmington High School are Debby Miller, president; Chris Tierman, vice president; Cheryl Lutzen, secretary; Bob Engerer, treasurer; and Diana Wolf, historian. Club activities began with a trip to the Old World Market in company with the Spanish and French Clubs. A car representing the Latin Club was entered in the homecoming parade.

After officers are installed late this month, plans will get underway for an authentic Greek and Roman banquet.

CLASS CUT-UPS — Mark Shear slices watermelon and Bob Thompson measures it into equal portions. It's part of their training in Farmington schools' new food technology course.

FLIP FLOP — While Rick Wesley pours, Jack Grant flips wheatcakes at the Orchard Ridge Campus snack bar under the approving eye of class instructor, Mrs. Charlotte Korte.

The North Farmington High seniors are taking the Farmington School District's new food technology course which meets at Orchard Ridge.

Kitchen Tricks Are Tools Of Trade

Chop, mince, saute, bake, sear, bread, coddie and baste — these words mean something to Farmington High School students currently enrolled in the newly developed food technology courses being held in cooperation with Oakland Community College.

The cooperative venture was jointly organized by Earl Bau- education for Farmington munk, director of vocational schools, and Roy Simescu, food service director for OCC on the Orchard Ridge campus in Farmington Township.

A half credit toward graduation. The initial class, Fundamentals of Quantity Food Production, explains and defines food terms, basic methods and principles, functions of foods in cooking and recipe technique. The second course, Advanced Quantity Food Production, teaches preparation of more complicated dishes, efficiency foods and gourmet items.

MANY of the initial students plan to utilize their new knowledge in future careers.

Mark Shear already works in a restaurant after school, and his classmate Bob Thompson hopes someday to wear the tall white hat of a "cordon bleu."

Joanne Supal "Just loves working with food" and will attend college with the hope of becoming a special chef. Darrell Robinson, looking forward to further education, has his sights set on hotel or restaurant management.

Hospital food preparation is Coleen Davis' eventual goal, while Jack Grant and Rick Wesley haven't quite made up their minds but are certain they will use their training.

SHARING the technology program with Waited Lake students, the Farmington contingent is on campus for two three-hour periods per week. Experts in the cooking and baking fields work directly with the students. Instructor is Mrs. Charlotte Korte. End products are served in the Orchard Ridge cafeteria and snack bar. One semester of work yields
