

Wonderful singing, cast delivers laughs in 'Baby'

SALLY DUBATS

Avon Players' 1993-94 season is ambitious, including four very diverse musicals and a comedy. Their first musical of the season, "Baby" (book by Sybille Pearson, music by David Shire, lyrics by Richard Maltby, Jr.), is a peculiar tale about the reproductive process, and the product (a baby) resulting in changed lives and relationships. The musical concentrates on three couples in very different situations who are either with or without child. Although this main message sometimes becomes too monotonous, to director/choreographer Jamie Richards' credit, very distinct characters make the show slightly more interesting. "Baby" begins with a funny cartoon-style slide show of the reproductive process, and progresses from there to introduce the three couples. Lizzie Field, played by Kristen Bergstrom, is a young, unmarried college student baffled by the consequences of her unexpected pregnancy. Twist in plot — her boyfriend Danny, played by Ken Grider, is the one who wants to marry and be responsible. Bergstrom is well cast as Lizzie and evokes sympathy and compassion for her character, but she is sometimes difficult to hear or understand. At the close of Act I, by Kevin Edwards and Jeanne DeLong. A terrific duo for Avon, Edwards and DeLong complement one another's strong performances. Another twist in tradition, tomboyish Pam hopes that her baby will have Nick's cooking genes. Edwards and DeLong deliver appreciated humor during "Baby, Baby, Baby," a song which picks the love couple share in anticipation of their new arrival. Skipping another decade are the 40-something couple. Arlene and Alan MacNelly's children have fled the nest. Tani Ann Mough is marvelous as Arlene, a 43-year-old woman conflicted in her decision to either have or abort her child, all the while coping with her relationship to her husband. Her rendition of "Patterns" is flawless and heartfelt. James M. Andrews turns in a laudable performance as Alan, a man who realizes that his 20 plus years of marriage have been based on the children. Vocally, Andrews "Easier to Love" presents musical craftsmanship combined with emotion. The chorus provides ample room for fun and frivolity, and have a polished funny-bone as various women in comical costumes fawn over Lizzie in "The Ladies Singing Their Song."

REVIEW

Notwithstanding some wonderful musical performances from the cast, and a warm interpretation by music director Lee George, the music, lyrics and book to "Baby" tend to be too specific and geared toward a highly specialized audience — women who have had or want to have babies. Although some universal appeal is apparent when relationship issues are being thrashed out, and there is some wonderful acting and singing, "Baby" focuses too narrowly on pregnant women with similar tunes for each song driving the message home even further.
