

Bridging The Gap

A bank account bridges the gap between want and plenty, between failure and success. It makes it easy to get over the hard places.

A bank account is within the reach of all. A little saved every week will guard you from the misery of want.

Cooking without a cook

From the beginning, it has been the lot of women to bend wearily over a fire and cook for hungry mate and offspring.

Today, the housewife is given freedom from this old-time chore. The Electric Range is automatic. All that the modern home-keeper has to do is to put the food in the oven, touch a switch or two, and set the little time clock.

Her task is done. She goes about other affairs, at home or abroad, forgetting the kitchen, and with the comfortable feeling that when dinner-time comes she will find a perfectly cooked meal ready for the table.

You can see the Electric Range in several types, at our display room

LISTEN!

and in July 1928—on the streets of Farmington
—you will probably overhear a conversation about like this:

John—"Hello Bill, How's everything?"
Bill—"Couldn't be better, John."
John—"Glad to hear it. Say, what do you think of that property you bought last winter down the Farmington Road?"
Bill—"I've quit thinking about it altogether, John."

John—"Is that so. How come?"
Bill—"Fleming sold it for me last week."
John—"Is that so. How much?"
Bill—"$6,000.00."
John—"What? Did you say $6,000? Why he offered it to me for $3,500 about six months ago."
Bill—"Well, John, I don't wish you any bad luck but I'm glad you didn't take it."
