Long Distance Rates are Surprisingly Low
... For Instance

for $1.40

Or Less, After 8:30 P. M.,

You can call the following points and talk for THREE MINUTES at the rates shown. Rates at other distant points are proportionately low.

FROM FARMINGTON TO:	Night Station-to-Station Rate
ATLANTA, GA.	$1.30
BIRMINGHAM, ALA.	1.40
BOSTON, MASS.	1.40
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.	1.20
NEW YORK, N. Y.	1.20
PHILADELPHIA, PA.	1.10
RICHMOND, VA.	1.15

The rates quoted above are Station-to-Station night rates, effective from 8:30 p. m. to 4:30 a. m.

A Station-to-Station call is one that made to a certain telephone, rather than to some person in particular.

If you do not know the number of the distant telephone, give the operator the name and address and specify that you will talk with "anyone" who answers at the called telephone.

Day rates, 4:30 a. m. to 7 p. m., and evening rates, 7 p. m. to 8:30
p. m., are higher than night rates.

A Person-to-Person call, because more work is involved, costs more than a Station-to-Station call. The rate on a Person-to-Person call is the same at all hours.

Never Say Die at Any Time

By LILLIAN HESTON

"THERE'S never a cloud so black, Janie, but that the bright sun is somewhere back of it."

"What's the use, if one can't use it, mother?"

"You'll see it soon and then you'll wonder that you ever doubted."

"I'm so discouraged. I don't want to live at all without my Robert."

"You're tired, child; sit there in the big chair—no, not the rocker. I want you quiet. Lean back and let your hands lie idle—no, don't clasp them, let them rest. See how still you can be. Let every thought go. I'll send you to sleep and you'll wake up feeling better."

In a slow, restful voice the mother murmured to her child: "We'll go right into the cloud you think so dark. We find it luminous with happy snowflakes or bright with happy little raindrops that make our flowers grow."

The weary girl slept and in her dreams the clouds were full of rainbow gleams.

Meanwhile the mother hurried with her work of cleaning and putting in order Janie's tiny house. There had been a year of radiant happiness within its walls. Tragedy had followed. The eagerly awaited baby had died, and Robert had lost his job. Janie had let everything go. She had grown listless, and developed a nagging habit. She reproached her husband for being out of work, and he had left home and had not been gone a month without a word. Today Janie's mother had arrived and taken charge.

When Janie awoke her home was spick and span and dinner cooking. She got up refreshed and the cheery aspect of the rooms gave her new hope and courage. She found her mother in the little kitchen and she smelled the mother's newly ready.

"The way to have your Robert back, girl, is to make a magnet of his home to draw him back; make it so strong in cheer and love that it will pull him back. He loves you, and your glowing thoughts and bitter words nearly drove him desperate. Let's play the wishing game until the dinner's cooked. Tell me your first wish."

"I want him back, my Robert."

"Good! Now it's my turn—I hope he has found work. A man's fill at ease and cross when he's out of work. It was that that drove him away. He'll be back as quick as he finds work. He was sad, too, with the loss of the baby."

"Then why didn't he stay to comfort me?"

"He was out of a job, and you complaining all the time and nagging him. Sure, it was the best thing he could do to get off, but he'll come back."

"He said he never would."

"And so the cloud makes believe it's dark, but it's not; it's full of light when we get into it. It's your turn to wish again."

"I wish he loved me."

"He does. Now it's my turn. I wish when he comes again he'll tell you every hour that he loves you and that you're the only woman in the wide world for him. It's the only way to content a woman. She thinks more of a fancy word than of deeds, and a man finds it so hard to believe that."

"I wish when he comes again I could learn to make him happy."

"Ah, now you're talking! Be peaceful, restful, keep a place within your heart a man can turn to when he's hard-pressed and discouraged, and find comfort and courage. A man comes home often, better, and sick at heart, and he wants no nagging nor fault-finding. He wants sympathy and a bit of babying. You'll never lose out if you baby a man and tell him he's the best ever."

"It's a month since he left, and my wish is that he comes home today."

"Sure, and perhaps he will, but you're a nice object to greet him! The house is clean and the dinner's near ready. Thin, quick, and put on your prettiest dress to welcome him if he comes, and remember, not a word of reproach or he'll be leaving again."

Janie fed it to [unclear], say with hope, and put on her prettiest dress. The soft color came into her cheeks with excitement and she looked again the girl her man had courted. She ran back to the little dining room and laughingly placed a chair and a plate for the master of the house.

They had not even begun to eat when they heard a step on the porch, a key in the lock. They held their breath and waited. The young man who came in so timidly as if doubtful of his reception was a lovable boy, merry-faced and spry, and his eyes brightened as his glance swept the orderly room and rested on his pretty dressed wife. He stammered an excuse for his long absence.

"Janie, love, I've got a fine job, better than the last. I wouldn't come near you till I got you, but I've missed you and it's glad I am to see you again. I'm glad your mother's with you. It's kind she is to come."

"Sit down, Robert, you're just in time. It's glad we are to see you. You have the body and the strength to stand up long after frail, flimsy arctics have broken under the strain. Floor-lined, 4 or 5 buckle, red or black.
