Archibald's Agatha

By EDITH HUNTINGTON MASON

Author of "The Real Agatha"

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular and intelligent young bachelor of London, returns to his home in the United States to the estate of his Aunt Gertrude, with an income of $20,000 a year. He is invited to stay in a small cottage within ten days. ... The story opens at Cedar, Wyoming, where Terhune meets his wife, Agatha, and his friend, Vincent. ...

"Then don't you understand?" she said. "Don't you see?" ... "Well, really, Dearest, I don't." ... "I don't see what all that has to do with—"

"Yes, I did ask the girl to marry me," he said, looking at her with a steady gaze. ... "I felt that I was not only doing her a wrong, but that I was doing myself a wrong, too."

"I did ask the girl to marry me," he said, looking at her with a steady gaze. ... "I felt that I was not only doing her a wrong, but that I was doing myself a wrong, too."

"Why he'd also refused me!" he said. ... "She told me if I were the last man on earth she wouldn't marry me! It was the only one I could have, and she should speak so harshly!" I thought I could: I fancied I understood Agatha's reasons for behaving as she did perfectly well, in the light of her suitors. ...

PNEUMONIA TAKES MARY BAKER EDDY

VENERABLE LEADER OF CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS HAD BEEN "IN ERROR" ABOUT A WEEK.

ANNOUNCEMENT, WITHHELD FOR 12 HOURS, IS MADE QUICLY AFTER SERVICES IN CHURCH.

Mrs. Eddy Was 89 Years Old and Was Known as "Discoverer" of Christian Science.

Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, who always insisted upon being called the discoverer and founder of Christian Science, died at her splendid mansion on Beacon street, in the Chestnut Hill section of the city of Newton, Mass., aged 89 years.

Death was due to an attack of pneumonia, from which the aged woman suffered about a week or ten days, in the opinion of Medical Examiner George L. West of Newton Center, who was called and viewed the body.

Alfred Farlow, chief press agent for the church of which Mrs. Eddy was the head, said that it was simply a case of old age, but after being informed by the reporters he gave out what the medical examiner had put upon the death certificate. These words were:

"Natural causes, the contributory cause being probable pneumonia." For more than a week Mrs. Eddy had been ailing, or as a Christian Scientist would put it, "had been in error" since the day of Friday, when she took the bus and did not leave it again.

Throughout she transacted some business and went out for a short drive. The following morning she arose at her usual hour and after brushing her hair she stepped into her bedroom to feel so weak that she went to bed. She failed to rise, but no practicing physician was called in, the members of the church, most of whom are Christian Science believers, giving her the regular treatment, and Mr. Farlow said that Mrs. Eddy brought all her own medicine to her in an effort to heal herself of the "error."

The end was a peaceful one, according to the press agent, and he said that Mrs. Eddy retained all her faculties to the last. He was unable to say whether the leader had carried on any conversation with those about her shortly before her death. He evidently failed to secure permission from the high authorities of the church to allow any details concerning Mrs. Eddy's last hours or movements.

The same mystery which has enveloped Mrs. Eddy's death has been thrown about her end. The undertaking was not allowed to say a word except through Mr. Farlow. Scarcely anything could be heard at her last illness, and the news of Mrs. Eddy's death was withheld from the public by the church for 12 hours after it occurred.
