

The Finish Depends on the Starter

Nothing means more to baby chicks than a good start in life and nothing means more to you than to give it to them.

All rules for correct feeding can be boiled down to: "The Right Feed at the Right Time." The right feed, of course, means LARRO, a starter having exactly the right ingredients to build brown and bone; to keep the chicks growing fast, yet evenly; to cover them with uniform close feathers; to build capacity and frame that will assure profit for you later.

Two more chicks raised out of each 100 hatched—two ounces added to the weight of each chick you raise—means $58.00 more income for you from each ton of feed. Don't forget that!

If you want more chicks, bigger chicks, better chicks, feed
