LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Base Line, Farmington
To the Editor.

Dear Sir:
It seems to me that, a community the size of Farmington could well afford to have a High School Band. A year ago now Northville was debating this subject, today Northville has a High School Band, any town might be proud of. I listened to them last Tuesday parading through the village, and some of them such little tots. Only a few weeks ago at the Rotary banquet at Northville, Gov. Green made the remark after the band had played a selection, that had communities provided for bands years ago, as the various Boards of Education are doing now, there would not be near so much crime. A school band would be a boon to Farmington, keep our boys out of pool halls, and other undesirable places, and educate them musically and what Plymouth, Northville, Redford, Royal Oak and other communities have done, we at Farmington could do. I would advise that some member of our school board take a trip over to Northville some night when these school boys and girls are rehearsing and hear them, and no doubt our friends at Northville would gladly tell how they made such a success in so short a time, and any other little details that goes with this proposition.

Hoping this will help to start someone thinking in Farmington, I am for this community first and last.

—J. H. Schreider.
