

TO EVERY HOME

A Merry Christmas

When Christmas comes, our thoughts turn first to the home. As we extend to each and every one our Christmas Greeting, it is but natural that most of all we think of happy homes full of warmth and cheer.

For in the building of almost every one, we have had a part. Into them have gone our products. From our yards have come the materials that made for them a strong and firm foundation. Our lumber has supplied the framework, and bricks and sidings that withstand the winter's storms. Our roofing shelters from the wind and weather. Our materials have made the interiors pleasing places in which to live throughout the year.

And then the house is finished—but it is not, for us, an ending of pleasant relationship—just a new beginning. For thenceforth it is our pleasant task to keep the new home warm and cozy, bringing the best of fuels to burn brightly in the family hearth.

And so it is with a feeling of warmest friendliness that we extend again to every family circle, our greetings and good wishes for a Merry, Merry Christmas.
