NEW 1929 PONTIAC SIX WILL BE DISPLAYED AT NEW YORK MOTOR SHOW

First public showing of the new Pontiac Six for 1929 is scheduled to take place at the opening of the New York Automobile Show on Saturday, January 5, the Oakland Motor Car Company has announced.

Following the New York Show this newest General Motors car, widely heralded as offering "big car features within price range of the small six," will be placed on exhibition at dealer showroom throughout the country as fast as dealers can be supplied with display models, it was stated.

The new Pontiac will share fourth place at the New York show with its companion car, the New Oakland All-American Six, thus indicating the rapid rise of the Oakland Motor Car Company to the volume field.

Exhibitors at the Show are allocated display space in the order of their rating based upon the dollar value of their car sales as compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce for a twelve-month period.

From twelfth place in 1927 and eighteenth place last year, the Oakland Motor Car company has passed eight competitors in only two years to take fourth place at the 1929 show, its aggregate sales for the year ending last June having been exceeded by only three other manufacturers.

FAMOUS NINE-ACT PLAY, "STRANGE INTERLUDE," TO BE SHOWN IN DETROIT

One of the most noteworthy events of the theatrical season in Detroit will be the presentation at the new Wilson Theatre, at 334 Madison avenue, Detroit, of Eugene O'Neill's long-awaited drama, "Strange Interlude." This much discussed nine-act play will be given by the Theatre Guild of New York for the fortnight commencing December 21.

In addition to the natural interest that attaches to all New York Guild productions, and to every play that comes from the pen of Eugene O'Neill, "Strange Interlude" has excited the curiosity of theatregoers from coast to coast because of two unusual facts—its length and its asides. Its length has by now become almost legendary so many have been the jokes made up about what one wit called "just an ordinary nine-act play." The play begins its course at 5:30 in the afternoon and continues until 11 p. m., with an intermission for dinner from 7:40 until 9, which is why there have been remarks about its being a dramatic marathon, and about "standing up in the seventh inning," but it has been noticed that the play is so engrossing no one has ever failed to stick the whole thing out.

The other novel element about the play is a revival in more pungent form, of the old-fashioned aside, though Mr. O'Neill's use of the device is entirely new. In "Strange Interlude" the characters not only speak openly to each other, but they voice, for the benefit of the audience, their innermost thoughts, which are often exactly contradictory of what they are saying. Mr. O'Neill has written this play in line with the latest theories of psychology with regard to the importance of the unconscious mind, so that his characters think aloud, for the audience, thoughts which they do not even know, themselves, that they are thinking, and in this way he exposes the true depth of his characters as no stage-figures have ever been probed into before.

On its presentation in New York last January this play proved to be an unprecedented sensation. It was the topic of the moment, the subject of sermons from the pulpit and newspaper editorials. And it is still, after nearly a year's run, the biggest hit in New York. In spite of its early starting hour (that prevents the giving of matinees) and great length, there has not yet been a single empty seat at any performance in New York, and usually there is a score or more of people who buy standing-room for each performance, and stand up for nearly five hours to see the play. It was awarded the Pulitzer prize of 1928 as being the best play of the season.

The theme of "Strange Interlude" is too complicated to sum-up briefly, but it may be said that it concerns the life history of one woman's struggle for happiness—a woman whose selfishness leads her to devour the lives of three men, and even to try to en-fold the life of her son.

Pauline Lord will play the leading role in the presentation of the play at the Wilson Theatre, and others in the cast will be Harry C. Bannister, Ralph Morgan, Donald MacDonald, Helen Ann Hughes and Walter Vonnegut.

CHEVROLET AGAIN WINS FIRST PLACE AT SHOW

When the New York Automobile Show opens next week, with more than 45 domestic manufacturers exhibiting their 1929 models, Chevrolet Motor Company will again be awarded first place at the Show.

Manufacturers are ranked strictly on the amount of business transacted during the fiscal year ending the August prior to the time the showing is held.
The first place award applies for both the New York and Chicago shows.

When Gasoline Was Dumped Into Ocean

In the process of distilling petroleum, the lighter oils, naphtha and gasoline are first obtained, and these were considered waste products for many years. Kerosene, the heavier oils and greases, constituted the greatest demand, and gasoline had only a limited use in exceedingly small quantities, such as the cleaning of fabrics.
Not only was gasoline practically useless in the "good old days," but it was dangerous because of the attendant risk of fire which was ever present wherever quantities were stored. Millions of gallons were loaded into huge tanks on barges, transported far out to sea, and there dumped. Thus was the fire hazard averted.

The advent of the internal combustion engine changed this, and gasoline in a few years became the principal product of the petroleum trade.
Kerosene lost caste with the coming of the electric light. The development of the automobile made the petroleum industry one of the richest of the nation, and the "dangerous byproduct" became one of our principal articles of trade.

In the early days of the automobile, when fuel was cheap, few manufacturers paid much attention to operating costs of their cars. Automobiles were costly, and the man who purchased them were wealthy. Gasoline was comparatively cheap, and the early automobiles used plenty of it.

Modern times have changed all this, and economy of operation is one of the essential requirements of the present-day automobile. Exhaustive tests are made, and every available scientific aid is used in this research.

Lighting Counsel for Home, Store or Factory

Home, store and factory lighting frequently are not used to maximum advantage. A paint brush often works wonders, and a dust cloth may save electric current now wasted. Decorative illumination lends charm to the living room; effective show window lighting attracts trade; and factory production keeps step with candlepower.

A Detroit Edison Home Lighting Adviser can offer you many valuable suggestions for using the decorative quality of light to improve household illumination. The counsel of our Illuminating Engineers is always at the service of merchants and factory managers.
