Man faces prison on drug charge

up to two years in prison on a drug charge that stemmed from a decision by Oakland County pro-secutors to appeal a judge's decision.

Michael Dwyer, 29, plended guilty to possessing marijuana in July of 1992. On its own, the admission would be a misdemeanor. But because Dwyer had been convicted of a stmilar charge in 1985, the second offense became a high miademeanor.

Dwyer, who was working as a security guard at Bob Saka Oldsmobile on Grand River in Farmington Hills, was charged after a half of a marijuana cigarette was found during a search of his car July 15, 1992. Hills police were looking for a gun after responding to a felonious assault call.

Judge Fred Harris ruled in 47th District Court that the search was had because there was no warrant, and no threat of an assault at the time. But the prosecutor's office appealed and Circuit Court Judges Robert Anderson reinstated the charge in June.
