Denials of any modern increase of cancer are being made by those who are competent to judge, both here and in Europe, and it is a timely warning against the popular terror which has been created by the mass of lay litter ature on the subject. There is no down kind more cases. There is no down kind more cases. There is no down kind the distribution of the computer them, so that the stutistic increase does not necessarily mean an actual increase.

Again, there are more people who survive early diseases and reach the "cancer age," so that there should be an actual relative increase of number of cases, but that is far from saying that a person in the cancer age is any more liable to contract that disease than were those who lived 50 years.
