Subtle wit makes 'Snapper'

FY JOHN MONATION STATE WATERS IN "The Snapper," a young woman announces to her parents that she is pregnant. On top of that, she refuses to divulge the identity of the father. What could have been either depressing or cloying is instead an incredibly wise and often hlarious film about fathers and daughters and their fragile place in the community. The new film, directed by Stephen Fraers, plays at the Detroit Film Theatre this weekend only.

"Star Trek: The Next Generation" and be surprised at his tremendous depth.
Dessie has the same weaknesses as any parent. He's incredibly supportive of doughter Sharon, reading health books and generally taking a much greater interest than he did in the birth of his own children. He can be a marty, too, loying on thick doses of Catholic guilt because the girl's condition has caused him embarressment at the pub.
The drinking scenes are especially vivid, whether they involve dad and his cronies sharing a pint or the tableful of loud young women shamelessly ogling men on the dance floor. It was on just such a night that the daughter got herself in trouble. Just who exactly she did it with knocks friends and family for a loop.
The other performers are nearly as strong, especially Tina Kellerher as Sharon. Her mother, as strong, especially Tina Kel-legher as Sharon. Her mother, meanwhile, has that special blend of wisdom and exhaustion that comes from raising a large litter of children.

As in "The Commitments," this movie captures perfectly the cramped living conditions that typify the working class in Dublin and London. The entire family squeezes onto the tatty couch watch music videos or sail races on television.
And in each action, whether it's a tender pat or a biting valgarity, the family shows a great natural affection for each other that is hard to convey on screen. More than any film in recent memory.
The Snapper' makes you feel like you're watching real people, not actors.

like you're watching real people, not actors.
Give plenty of credit to Stephen Frears, the director of "My Beautiful Laundette" and "Dangerous Liaisons," who has abandoned hollywood temporarily to create the kind of aubtie film that established his reputation a decade ago. He has made a movie full of small miracles that will creep into your thoughts long efter the lights come up.

You may not go home humming Otis Redding songs, as you did after "The Commitments," buy ou'll be sligning the praises of this witty and intelligent film.

LIVE REVIEW

Duran Duran/James The Palace of Auburn Hills Jan. 4

"Come Undone" may be the name of a Duran Duran hit single, but it should have been the official name of their win-single, but it should have been the official name of their winter U.S. tour.

Unlike their show this summer at Pine Knob, which featured an elaborate interactive set designed by Stefanos Lazaridis, the band opted for a scaled-down set that included a black curtain backdrop and simple lighting.

The stripped-down set, however, didn't hamper the show Plagued by voice problems during the summer and early fall, lead singer Simon LeBon's voice sounded significantly fresher and less hearse. Except light set of the summer and carly fresher and less hearse. Except light sounded significantly fresher and less hearse. Except light set of the summer, have sold during "Come Undone" was one of the highlights of the performance.

During the two-hour show, burna Duran puted for a moody, soulful rendition of "Hungy Like the Wolf," and a cover of Grandmaster Flash's "White Lines" (thanks to John Taylor's funky bass playing).

Taylor's funky bass playing). The former 1980s heartthrobs stuck with the original formula when singing many of their hits like "Girls on Film," "Rio" and "The Reflex." The set was less of a "greatest hits" show than the summer, choose ing to include more tracks off their latest eponymous album.

Those who missed the show, can catch it on Fux 50's "Front Page" television series, which airs at 9 p.m. Saturdays. Acrew filmed the show and backstage footage for a future telecast. (An air date was not available at press time.)

The British pop band James, which opened the show, performed a rather lackluster set. The Palace's massive stage swallowed the hand although James boosts an 8-member band, including a violinist. Lead singer Tim Booth danced wildly during a few songs but rocked back and forth during songs off their latest album "Laid." Songs from moody yet hauntingly beautiful album were a significant part of the set which didn't include their alternative pop hit "Sit Down."
