"'Anywhere I Hang My Hat Is Home,' the theme of the show, will demonstrate the relationship of the hat to the home and the person. Hats are worn for protection, ceremony, fashion, vocational and ethnic identification and sports activities, and are symbols of how and where a person lives.

"It is exciting that so many people are participating, since all members are given the opportunity to do so," said general chairman Nancy Passfield of Farmington Hills, a state past president, former chairman of the 1991 and 1993 Ann Arbor

Division I, Design, includes 17 classes. For instance, Phyllis Werner of Bloomfield Hills is entering the "Cheers" class, a design niche. It is to be a synergistic design using several containers and plant materials to create an artistic whole.

Jean Moran of Farmington, director of District 1, was chairman of the 1992 show and is an accredited flower show judge and instructor. She is entering several floral designs including an op art piece, using dried material with white lines painted over a black interior, which cre-

"This is a marvelous time to have the show because we're ready for spring and this gives us a month's run on it — seeing all the beautiful flowers," she said. "The creativity of the designers proves that this show will have the creme de la creme."

Jencka, District I vice chairman, a floral designer, will enter the "Chuck Wagon" class. Her creation is called "A Supper on the Ground . . . Roundup Time on the Dude Ranch." It features a picnic-type supper with a Western flavor. The spokes of a

The icing on the cake is an invitation exhibit of artistic designs created by guest arrangers. All of these exhibits will be on the club level at the north end of the building, near the Main Event restaurant.

In addition to the flower show, more than a dozen gardens will be constructed on the main floor blooming with colorful flowers that will get you in the mood for the upcoming gardening season.

Co-sponsored by the department of education and ACCESS' Cultural Arts Program, the presentation is designed to share Arabic arts and culture with a wider
