Outage unplugs 4,300 local customers

Two malfunctioning transformers at a Detroit Edison substation in Southfield caused about 4,300 Farmington-area customers to lose power Monday morning for about a half-hour.
The power outage was from 7:52-8:23 a.m. and affected customers south of 13 1/4 mile, north of 11 Mile Road, East of Inkster and west of Orchard Lake in Farmington Hills.
But several businesses in Farmington and Farmington Hills south of Nine mile also reported either a power outage or a partial outage if they had two-phase wiring.
The company had not determined the problem at the substation as of Tuesday, said Scott Simons of Edison.
