Harrison student Avi Drissman is a semifinalist in the United States Physics Olympics competition, which seeks to find the five best high school physics students in the country. As a semifinalist, Drissman is considered one of the top 75 high school physics students in the country and has

FINE FELLOW

Walrus College, based in Crawfordsville, Ind., has awarded James Edward Haynes with a fellowship in honor of the Lilly family of Indiana. The award includes full tuition and room and board for four years as well as a stipend up to $1,000 for travel and study after the sophomore or junior year.

Haynes, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Haynes Jr. of Farmington Hills, is one of 10 chosen for the award, which recognizes young men who have outstanding potential for achievement and leadership in adult life.

EAGER READERS

Alameda Early Childhood Center hosted a musical play, "Peter and the Wolf," March 23-24 as well as a folk tale storyteller March 23 as part of March Reading Month activities. Parents, staff and children heralded Reading Month with an Olympic book parade in the gymnasium March 3-4. Each class represented a specific country and carried a flag. The parade kicked off the school's Olympic book reading race.

Little Caesars promotes Hills man

Michael Scruggs of Farmington Hills has been promoted to the position of group vice president at Little Caesars Enterprises Inc.

As group vice president, he will be responsible for overseeing Little Caesars' nontraditional and specialty concept development. For the past two years, Scruggs has been the vice president of Little Caesars/Kmart Pizza Stations where he oversaw the development of more than 500 Little Caesars Pizza Stations in Kmart stores throughout the United States, and in the Czech and Slovak republics.

He began his career at Little Caesars in 1978 as a manager trainee for the Little Caesars Pizza Station division and was one of the first employees to graduate from the Little Caesars management development program. Scruggs managed the first Little Caesars located in a shopping mall and helped to establish the first Little Caesars concessions at Joe Louis Arena.

He has held many positions at Little Caesars including area supervisor, director of Pizza Stations, and director of U.S. company operations. In 1986, he was named vice president of company operations. In this capacity, he relocated to Los Angeles and oversaw the development of the Los Angeles, San Jose, Houston, Dallas and Colorado markets.

Scruggs was named Little Caesars 1988 Employee of the Year, an award presented annually to an employee who has made outstanding contributions to the company, while displaying high levels of productivity and displaying dedication, kindness, enthusiasm and integrity. Scruggs lives in Farmington

Nurse named executive chief of national group

Marjorie Beyers, a registered nurse and former associate vice president of Nursing and Allied Health Services for Mercy Health Services in Farmington Hills, has been appointed executive director of the American Organization of Nurse Executives (AONE), a national association for nurse executives and nurse managers and a subsidiary of the American Hospital Association.

"Dr. Beyers has a prestigious and innovative history in health-care management, nursing administration and education, and public policy," said George W. Belsey, AONE's executive vice president for professional affairs. She holds adjunct faculty appointments at Wayne State University and the University of Michigan. As the new executive director of the AONE, Beyers will be promoting and sustaining the organization's mission by leading and directing its advocacy, professional growth, policy and research efforts.
