

Concert to key on Choralaires

The Lutheran Choralaires will highlight the Farmington Muscalle's upcoming concert to benefit a scholarship fund.

The concert will be at 8 p.m. Friday, April 22, at North Congregational Church, 26275 Northwestern Highway, Southfield.

Mary Sue Ewing, a soprano from Farmington Hills, will sing arias. Nichole Martin, violinist from Farmington Hills and a 1993 scholarship winner, also will perform.

Both will be accompanied by Mary Behnan of Farmington Hills, Eleanor Peets, a pianist from Farmington, and pianist Jean Elms will perform a duet of Rachmaninoff.

David Marasus, director of the Lutheran Choralaires, will also entertain on the organ and will be joined by Karen Koch for a piano and organ duet.

Master of Ceremonies this year will be John McElroy who is editor in chief of Automotive Industries magazine and also does automotive reports on WWJ radio station.

The concert will be followed by a meet-the-artists afterglow. Tickets are $10 for adults and $6 for students through Grade 12.

Call Carol Wood at 646-6826 or Nan Taylor at 553-0393 for more information.

Ready to sing: The Lutheran Choralaires will perform at the Farmington Muscalle's benefit concert.

4 judges to lend an ear for auditions

Farmington Muscalle has four judges for the annual scholarship auditions on Saturday, April 23, at Nanlin Park United Methodist Church.

Pianists will perform before Curtis Mathison, organist and pianist, serving at First Methodist Church of Wayne. He has performed concerts, composed and now teaches privately.

Roxanne Oliver, who will be judging the string participants, teaches in the Troy School District. She is an active performing violinist who has also taught at Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp and Interlochen All-State Orchestra Programs.

Vocalists will sing for Anna Speck, soprano, who chairs the voice program at the Center for Creative Studies and is a member of the voice faculty of Wayne State University.

Patrick Authement, who also will be judging, has been active in conducting community bands in Louisiana, North Carolina and Maryland. He teaches in the Detroit School District and is a member of the Metropolitan Clarinet Consort.
