Hills crew helps clean up chemical spill

Hazardous waste specialists from the Farmington Hills Fire Department helped a crew from Chemlawn clean up a liquid fertilizer spill on Nottoway Drive in northwest Farmington Hills at 9:54 a.m. Monday.

The Chemlawn crew had diked the spill into a confined area and were soaking it up when the Hills crew arrived. A resident notified the fire department of the spill.

The department provided soap and water to wash down the street after an absorbent was used on the spill. About 750 gallons of water were used in the cleanup that went into a storm drain 300 feet south of the spill area.

A vinyl hose used to apply the chemicals failed, allowing 50-80 gallons of the tank mixture to spill.

In another incident, Farmington Hills firefighters from Station

3 answered a call for a gas leak at the Flamingo Trailer Park on Middlebelt at 12:30 a.m. May 2.

Firefighters had to force open the trailer door, where the occupant was asleep and the odor of a gas leak was detected.

They helped the resident out of the trailer, turned off the gas, ventilated the trailer and found the source of the problem, an inoperable furnace valve.

Also, an employee of Dynamic

Muffler told Farmington Hills firefighters from Station 2 that a fire started after he was siphoning gasoline from a car in for repairs to its fuel pump at 2:08 p.m. May 2.

Some fuel spilled and ignited, extending flames up to the 1988 Buick Regal being serviced. The employee was able to put out the fire, but damage to the car was $1,000 and damage to the property was $100.
