defense and athleticism," Davis said. "This year Candace will be counted on for more points and once again to be a defensive stopper."

"The style of ball we play — we like to press and be in transition — fits her style and type of player she is."

The Raiders will use a three-guard offense again, but they graduated perimeter players Allison Stein and Danielle Labadie. North also will be a young team with only two seniors — Gordon and 6-8 Christina Glover.

The top contenders are a trio of 5-5 guards: junior Lis Weber, who started for two years at Farmington Hills Muncy, sophomore Kathy Collins and freshman Kellie Fournier.

Fournier's three-point shooting prompted Davis to compare her with Stein and former star Eve Clear, now at Central Michigan. Five-9 freshman Malissa Gratz also can shoot three and will help in the post.

"Collins, Fournier and Gratz were major contributors to the success we had in the summer league," Davis said. "They have an edge on the other girls in terms of their knowledge and how to utilize the offense."

"Lis has to be retrained in terms of what we do as opposed to what Muncy does. If she can fight through that frustration, Lis could be a great asset for us in terms of her knowledge and overall court sense."

The varsity also includes sophomores Trisha Traxler, 5-10/4 post; Elina Engel, 5-9 post; Michelle Sklar, 5-3 guard; and Michelle Marsee, 5-8 forward.

The Raiders begin the season with home games next Tuesday and Wednesday against West Bloomfield and Birmingham School.

"If we play like we did this summer, we can do just as well (as last year)," Davis said. "If we don't come together as a team, it could be a long season."

"I've seen both sides, where we looked like world beaters and then could only score four points in a 20-minute scrimmage. I'm tickled to think what we can become and scared of what could happen if we don't reach our potential."

A way out: Junior Carrie May gets out of trouble last year by going around Clarenceville's Wendy Roy.

60th year for Classic

HARRISON

Les Stanford Chevrolet, the league will maintain its reputation as the premier classic league in the nation.

In the early days, the names were those of Joe Norris, Tony Lindemann, Buzz Fazio, Billy "G," and Eddie Lubanski.

Today, the Observer & Eccentric cities are most prominent in filling the teams' rosters with such stars as Cass City's Rick Elermann, Ryan Wilson, Troy Stus, Larry Walker, Steve Klein and Karl Brubaker; Tony Sulpac and Jon Reed, from Redford Township; Ray Krauter, Doug Brubaker, Steve Klefer and rookie Dave Capaldi, from Westland; Ken Kosack, Tom Brudzinski and Bryan Macek, from Canton; George Fineran, from Livonia; Doug Spicer of West Bloomfield;

Opening ceremonies for the Les Stanford Chevrolet Hall of Fame Classic were Tuesday at Thunderbowl Lane.

It marks the 60th year of competition for this history-making league. Now, under the new sponsorship of Bruce Falcon of Rochester Hills; Dan Ottman, from Troy, and Gerald Brown and rookie Jason L. Johnson, from Farmington Hills. To bowl in this type of competition is to reach the top level of the game. Many competitors past and present have been on the Pro Bowlers Tour at one time or another.

Walker and Sulpac have bowled for "Team USA." The opening ceremonies were combined with the "Turbo 2-in-1 Grips All-Star Traveling Classic," which bowls Thursdays at various bowling centers throughout the area.

On Wednesday the "Arena Pro Shop Ladies All-Star Classic" held opening ceremonies at Thunderbowl, starting at 7:30 p.m. Many of these women reside in Observer & Eccentric cities, also, and they help point to our area as the "Home of the better bowlers." Our communities can take pride in both the quantity and the quality of our bowlers.

Let's not forget, this weekend is "Bowling Expo '94" at Gibraltar Trade Center North in Mount Clemens. Take I-94 to the North River Road exit and you are there. The event will feature equipment discounts, new products, league and tournament opportunities, information and instruction. The Greater Detroit Bowling Hall of Fame will also be on display.
