Supply of Pulp Wood.

Just what quantity of pulp wood is now on hand in this province is difficult to state, as the estimates vary all the way from 300,000 to 1,000,000 all the way from 300,000 to 1,000,000 cords.

From a personal examination along the various railway lines it seems oer tain that south of the St. Lawrence there are at this time no less than 200,000 cords stacked up at or near the several railway stations. There may be 60,000 cords more at remoter places. In the territory to the north of the river there are at least 100,000 additional cords, making a total of 300,000 and possibly much more, exclusive of the supply at the pulp mills required in making their pulp in the pulp of the second supply is not controlled. A Lively Cause.

Some time ago a representative of the gas company decided that the gas meter of a certain business house in Washington Court House, Ohlo, was not working properly; in other words, not working property.

the company was of the opinion that it was furnishing more gas than it was getting paid for, so it decided to examine the meter. Imagine its surprise when it found the meter iteratily full of cockroaches, which had so interfered with the working of the meter that the gas bill jumped up from about 310 a month to something like $25 after the ronches were removed. The bashness man said that this was the first time be knew that there was any real good in a cockroach. the company was of the opinion that i

Wellington said to Grevillo that while "unquestionably Napoleon was the greatest military genius that over existed . he had advantages which no other man over possessed in the unlimited means at his command which so there may over possessed in the unlimited means at his command and his absolute power and irresponsibility." When one turns from [Napoleon's dispatches to Lee's, one [is instantly struck with the difference in this regard. Napoleon says: Gd here, do this, ist, these troop's be on this sport at that date. They are there. It is done. Lee suggests cauttously, lost instants courteously. But his greatest art is to keep still. It is very rare that he goes so far as the reported humorous saying, "that he had a critk in his neck from fooking over his shoulder toward Richmond." How General T. J. Jackson Literally Obeyed the Order That Was Given by General Smith.

Probable Duration of Life, A. H. Stewart, Lawton, Del, are that recent discoveries in science place the responsibility of prolonging life upon the individual and the community. All knowth begins the the cell, and the rate of growth is most rapid when the tissues are, at their least density, early in life. Continued denurition leads to permanent phystical degeneration. The infal achievement of the body is more affected by dedicient untition late than early in life. Life lasts as long as lan adjustment can be maintained bytween intiernal and ierternal relations. Mortality depends on the hysiquele state of the community. Life is at present lengthening in Europe at the rate of 17 years a century. So it is probably to a less degree in America. If medicine and sanitary science go on improving at the present rate liffe will be materially increased in length by the end of the present century.—Nedleal Record. Probable Duration of Life
